Elder Held in Gun Case: Court Told He Kissed Girl

By ARTHUR J. QUINN

Boston Evening American Staff Reporter

Greenfield, June 3—Testimony about "peeping" and kissing at Mt. Hermon School for Boys, where the unsolved shotgun murder of Headmaster Elliott Speer occurred in 1934, startled spectators in district court here today.

S. Allen Norton, former cashier at the school, testified he cut a peephole in order to spy on Thomas E. Elder, who was then the dean, and that he saw Dean Elder kiss his secretary, a Miss Dill.

Elder, on trial today for alleged assault with intent to kill the aged Norton with a shotgun on the night of May 25, was held in $10,000 bail for the grand jury after a two-hour session.

The story of the peephole at the famous boys' school came out during cross-examination of Norton, during which the last days of Headmaster Speer were also touched upon.

ADMITS SPYING

After Norton had "positively" identified Elder as his assailant on the night of May 25, the former dean's lawyer went into "bitter feeling" existing between the two

Death Attempt Fails, Man 52, Girl 19 Back

Thirteen days' search for a 52-year-old Wakefield married man and a 19-year-old Wakefield High school girl ended suddenly and dramatically today.

Alson C. Smith of Bellevue avenue drove up to the door of his house, the half-conscious form of Dorothy E. Chase beside him. As waiting police flung open the doors of his car, he said, according to police:

"I wish now I'd finished the job. We were going to death together!"

In the rear of Smith's car, according to police, was a 12-foot length of hose with a coupling to attach it to the exhaust pipe of the automobile.

BREAKS DOWN

Smith broke down, the officers at the scene said, and told them that he and the girl had tried to asphyxiate themselves two hours before on a lonely road near Danvers.

"But when I saw her going and

Diz Scorns Apology, Stays Under N. L. Ban

New York, June 3 (AP)—Dizzy Dean today refused to sign any statement of apology to the National League for his actions on and off the field and remains under definite suspension.

Disciplined yesterday by Ford Frick, league president, for "conduct detrimental to the best interests of baseball," the famed right-hander of the St. Louis Cardinals, together with Manager Frank Frisch, held a two-hour conference with Frick today.

Dean issued a flat denial that he ever had made the statement, attributed to him, which reflected upon the integrity of the National League's officers and the umpires. He declined, however, to sign any statement refuting them.

Accordingly Frick announced his

Kidnap, Rob Man of $209 in Own Auto

Kidnaped at gunpoint by a hold-up man who hid in his car while he went into the Norwood Trust Company today, William Koyvu of Millis street, Medfield, was robbed of $209.

The victim of the robbery parked his car near the bank, on Washington street, in the business center of Norwood, while he went in to cash some checks.

When he emerged from the bank he went directly to his car and was driving away when he felt a gun against his back and heard a man's voice say:

"Keep quiet and go just where I tell you."

Nobody on the busy street was aware anything unusual was taking place, as Koyvu drove through the town at gunpoint.

Heeding the commands of his captor, he drove to Oak street, Wsetwood, where he was ordered to turn into a side road.

There the gunman relieved him of his cash and disappeared in the woods, leaving Koyvu with his automobile.

VICAR FACES OUSTER BY CHURCH

By DAVID P. SENTNER

Copyright, 1937, by International News Service

London, June 3—His bestowal of religious blessings on the wedding of the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Wallis Warfield threatened today to cost the Rev. R. Anderson Jardine, vicar of St. Paul's Church, Darlington, his parish and his future ecclesiastical career.

The liberal-minded little "poor man's parson" who volunteered to marry the duke and Mrs. Warfield in a religious ceremony today, and was accepted for the task, will be summoned before the Parochial Council of St. Paul's at its next meeting at the end of the month.

There he will be "put on the carpet" and asked to explain his failure to consult his ecclesiastical superiors before undertaking to marry the former monarch and the twice-divorced American woman in defiance of Church of England disapproval.

Decision to summon Jardine was reached at an emergency meeting of the council, attended by parish trustees. The vicar's action was hotly condemned and those present appeared to be overwhelmingly in favor of removing the controversial little parson from his post.

Meanwhile high dignitaries of the

Chateau de Cande, Monts, France, June 3 (AP)—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor, married today in two ceremonies, left their Touraine retreat tonight at 6:20 o'clock (1:20 P. M., E. D. T.) for the "Haunted castle of Wasserleonburg" to spend their honeymoon in Austria.

The radiantly happy couple left after having been united in a French civil ceremony and the religious service of the Church of England.

Only a small group of guests attended the nuptials and wedding breakfast just 25 weeks after Edward forfeited his crown of England and empire because Wallis Warfield could not be his Queen.

The bridal couple left the chateau by automobile. They were said to be planning to board a special train at the town of Laroche-Migennes. They sent 226 pieces of their baggage ahead.

CROWD CHEERS NEWLYWEDS

The duke and duchess left the chateau after Edward, in a message to the press, had said:

"After the trying time we have been through we now look forward to a happy and useful life and to that measure of peace which we hope will be granted us."

Before they passed through the chateau gates in an automobile driven by George Stanley Ladbrook, Windsor's favorite chauffeur, police cleared the way.

The duchess, sitting on the right side of the closed car, leaned against the open window and waved her handkerchief. The crowd at the castle gates cheered.

Edward sat deep back beside his bride and acknowledged the cheering by nodding his head.

"I will," the supremely happy duke answered in a firm, loud voice to the Anglican poor man's parson who gave him the unsanctioned blessing of the Church of

Harvard Wisely Fights Liberty's Foes

TO KNOW America is to love America and to love America is to resist the foes that threaten her from within as well as from without.

That is the theory and purpose of Harvard University's new American History reading guide for students and the general public.

It recognizes the truth that Communism, Fascism and other vicious forms of propaganda take root and thrive in ignorance.

It frankly states, in the words of the Faculty Committee:

> "As a result of ignorance and indifference there is a lack of resistance by even well-educated persons to various forms of propaganda which would have them conceive 'Americanism' in terms of class, party, sectional, racial or religious affiliations.
>
> "American ignorance of American history and literature, of the arts of this country, and of American intellectual development, is DEPLORABLE, and even DANGEROUS for the future.
>
> "Unless citizens of a democracy are aware of the means by which their country has become what it is, the efforts and sacrifices that have been made in the past to secure liberty and opportunity for the present, they are apt to exchange their birthright for the proverbial mess of pottage."

TRUER words were never spoken. Dictatorships and tyranny are the children of ignorance. Citizens indifferent to the freedom and privileges that they have inherited grow careless of their legacy and a minority steals it.

That has been the story of oppression from the earliest days of civilization. And what has happened and is happening in other parts of the world can happen in America IF WE CONTINUE TO BE CARELESS AND INDIFFERENT.

It, therefore, behooves all who can to follow the wise advice of Harvard and to begin a daily study of American History.

There could be no better investment of time and effort. For the general knowledge and appreciation of America's greatness today will insure her continued greatness tomorrow.

Air Traffic Rules

THE new air traffic regulations drafted by the Bureau of Air Commerce should do much to stop hazardous and haphazard flying.

Director Fred D. Fagg has announced that "trunk highways of the air" will be established, to be operated on a "stop and go" plan.

The regulations are intended to make certain that a pilot who takes a ship into the air KNOWS HOW TO FLY IT.

If he flies at night or in bad weather, he will have to be fully qualified for blind flying.

They are also intended to make sure that every ship going into the air is fully equipped for SAFE FLIGHT, including two-way radio.

All these things are necessary.

The determination of the Bureau to control all machines and pilots IN THE INTEREST OF SAFETY is proper.

It is not enough, of course.

There must be many more permanent and more emergency landing fields in every part of the country than are now available.

There must be much more adequate weather reporting facilities, more reliable radio safeguards, more complete marking of airways.

There must not be chance-taking about the weather, about flying over deserts or mountains or into predictable storms or hazards, even by wholly competent pilots and planes.

The Bureau is entirely right in its position that planes and pilots should meet rigid standards of safety.

Safe aviation is one of the URGENT NEEDS of the nation, and it is being URGENTLY DEMANDED by the people.

Television in Three Years

TELEVISION broadcasting in three years, every radio a miniature motion picture apparatus, every home a "theater"—that is the prediction of M. I. T. scientists.

The announcement, contained in the "Technology Review," interests everyone. Here, perhaps, is one solution to the unemployment problem.

Thousands will work in the factories that will manufacture "sets." Other thousands in the stores that sell them. And still other thousands in the studios throughout the country.

Thus, many who used the unemployment period to study and train themselves for better jobs will find them.

Television also provides another interesting speculation. Will audiences seeing and hearing a glib speaker be moved as they were when they heard only his voice? And will television raise the standards of public office and replace politicians with statesmen?

No one knows the possibilities of television. It challenges—even defies—the imagination. We can only hope that in this, as in all the other marvels that Science promises us, lies greater happiness for all the people.

Mr. Goodwin's Warning

HUNDREDS of Massachusetts motorists face suspension of their registrations.

That is the warning of Registrar Goodwin, who threatens to remove from the highways the many automobiles which still fail to carry official "O. K." stickers.

And, as though to add force to the warning, scores of inspectors are stopping and examining stickerless cars in various parts of the state.

The Registrar's warning should be sufficient. Conscientious motorists will not wait until they are stopped on the road. They know properly tested machines are safe machines. And they will drive no other.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, June 2—No entertainer has more successfully withstood the collective Broadway boo than the young comedian, Milton Berle. Because of his fresh manner he has from his beginnings been a thorn in the street's side. Others like him have been vanquished by scorn, but not Berle.

O. O. McIntyre

He carries on with impudent grin—rising from coffee and cakes to a several-thousands-a-week performer. In many ways he expresses the same brashness that once characterized the now sedate and well beloved George M. Cohan when he was yowling his Yankee Doodle stuff.

Berle's career might well be labeled The Rise of a Smart Alec. Yet those who know him say it was only a part of his act. Away from the footlights he is unusually shy, and despite his feigned sophistries is a typical Mama's boy. She is his constant companion.

He went into the old Palace as a fill-in act and wound up a headliner held over for many weeks. He then wowed them in cabarets, landed a top bracket job on the radio and later was taken to Hollywood to be featured in films. And at 30 is rich enough to rest on his oars.

There is gaiety about those perky open-until-2-a.m. hat and gown shops upstairs over Broadway and around the side street corners in the 40's. Each is staffed with a Peter Arno type of proprietress, kown as "Modom", and a bright girl assistant or so.

Most of the customers are show and cabaret girls who drop in between or after shows, usually with a boy friend to pick up a few bargains. The moment the girls and their beaux enter flattery is turned on, faucet-like.

The big play is on the boy friend—and he is given "the works," often so expertly he finds himself on the business end of a half a dozen purchases when he only intended to look around.

Few virtues are more appealing than frankness. At a dinner to several intimates the other night the host, whose spread was sumptuous, had a jar of buckshot-sized Beluga caviar at his plate side which he alone dipped into. Nor did he offer to share it. As he made his third canape, he explained: "This is my sole extravagance and I never share it. Only one in a thousand has a true taste for caviar anyway."

Somehow we all warm to such forthrightness, even though it is a violent digresssion from ordinary courtesy.

From Fred Nibio: "Your sympathetic comment on William Faversham with his 'chin up' and the many other Favershams going over the lost horizons with heads high painted a picture that few of the younger world will understand. It was fine."

Every day at the Lambs and Players there appear vanquished valiants of the stage who have been unable, as have so many, to indulge in the bounties of Hollywood. Most of them are living in far away rooming houses, several flights up and all the way back, but there is never a whimper.

They give the impression that so far as they are concerned everything is on the up and up.

Charles Phelps Cushing, one of the Kansas City Star alumni, is probably dean of New York free lances. For a quarter century he has been prowling about the metropolis with camera and note pad—catching unusual views and picking up stray stories of interest. A pipe smoking bachelor, he has spent most of his time in the city in a West Side apartment.

Bill Corum picking up a bullet in the hip and a few Page 1 headlines at a dawnish hour a recent morning shows what can happen to a Boonville, Missouri, boy in the big city, violating the curfew law.

From his Louis XVI suite in a totsy tavern Bill can look down upon me at my daily chores. As a younger man and a fellow Missourian I have tried by precept and example to impress upon him the virtues of hard work and regular hours. Now and then I have tried to dazzle him at my beside-the-window seat with something wild in the way of lounging robes. Once I even let him gaze upon my Lanvin yellow ensemble with the purple sash—but evidently to no avail.

He's simply not the esthetic type of litterateur. He has shown plainly that he would rather go his way, keep his own hours, even if he has to be shot.

When modesty was modesty: I can think of no small town characterizer that has ever touched Rose Wilder Lane's description of the severe and reserved woman, who held herself as straight as a ramrod, and always buttoned her gloves in privacy. To her intimates she sniffed:

"A lady never appears in public until fully dressed."

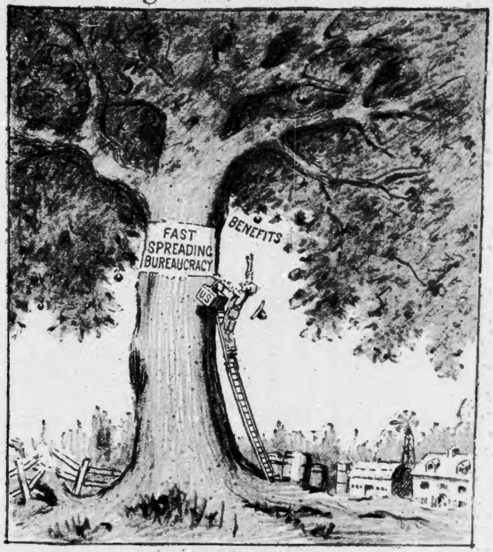
Big Tree, Little Fruit



By Nelson Harding

This growth has giant branch and root
And yet supplies but skimpy fruit.
The foliage so widely spread
Results in too much overhead.

It casts a shadow far and wide
And saps the soil on every side.
In size it is a sight to see,
But not a profitable tree.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

It's one of those stories that somehow you never read. Yet you'll find its duplicate in a thousand offices and homes. So if my fingers fumble and my eyes blur with grateful tears, maybe you'll understand—because you're lucky enough to have a Sam of your own.

Elsie Robinson

Sam Paquin. For many a year that name has been over top newspaper jobs all over these United States. Now he's the final blue pencil authority who checks copy in my organization. Reads it over . . . polishes it off . . . gets it down to the printers and off to the paper on schedule, no matter how late it arrives.

Some job—that! Riding herd on a hundred writers . . . standing steady when the lids are popping off!

Does Sam ever, I wonder, get home on time for a meal? Bet not! Night after night I've seen him bending over his desk when everyone else has gone . . . helping some poor fellow to make a desperate "deadline."

Being late with your copy—that's bad enough, with empty space crying from Cape Cod to the Golden Gate. But there are things still harder to manage . . . things that only Sam knows. Sickness. Times when the doctor has handed you a scare that would jolt the Empire State. Trouble in the family. Two operations, a wedding, a baby and a mortgage coming due all at once. How do they think you can manage to pay for it all?

BITTER MEMORIES

And the old heartache that never heals. Dates that, just remembering, get you down. That last smile . . . those ghastly hours . . . Perhaps if you'd acted sooner . . . done something else . . . OH LITTLE KID, I MISS YOU SO!

So you write, and write frantically . . . trying to redeem yourself. Feeling it's all useless . . . that you'd better quit.

And then—careless like—in comes a letter from Sam. ..ever a mention of work. Just a friendly ramble about friends . . . a swell thing he'd heard some one say . . . how politics were stacking in Teneck . . . and the daughter was doing herself proud with that new art assignment . . . and the little wife was prettier than the day they'd married.

Only a careless, neighborly note. But looking out, into the night, you see a tired man bending over his desk. Staying in a cluttered, deserted office because your copy's late. Pounding out those steadying, kindly words because he knows you need a hand. Putting aside his own worry to serve yours.

OUR REAL FRIENDS

Soothing away your terror and giving you FAITH instead . . . faith to believe in yourself because Sam believes in you!

Just Sam! Suddenly, as though the tears had washed your eyes clean for a wider vision, you see that vast throng of other "Sams" who also serve through the long night. Patient, adoring mothers . . . loving, unselfish fathers . . . gallant youngsters, sacrificing their own chances to give someone a better break.

Common folk—leading lives that may never make the front page. And yet, what was it He had said—He Who knew best the beauty and valor of simple service? "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

Clear through the night in a shining trail, more splendid than gold, more glorious than precious jewels, these unknown ones proceed upon their gentle way..."laying down," hour by hour, their constant gift of FAITH and CHEER and UNDERSTANDING TENDERNESS...giving themselves that others, distraught and bewildered, may live!

Just Sam? Dear Sams—all of you—what would this world be without you!

'Yure's Truly'

By Winston Norman

Safety Editor,
Boston Evening American,
Dear Mr. Editor:

I am the father of 2 children, so I am more in favor of Safe Driving than anybody. But I am hearby going to start a fight with the way we been trying to cut down our U. S. Accidents.

As for Modern Autos, they are made so smooth and easy-driving nowadays that all you do is press a button to drive them, and the next thing you know you are asleep.

As for more Safety Signs, that is what like to kill my Cousin Elmer the other day. The Hospittle phoned me and says, "We got a case down here that was hit by a truck, he claims you are his Next of kin."

I went rushing down to the Hospittle, where he was kind of babbling in bed, and I says, "How did it happen?"

"Well," says Elmer, "I come to a corner, driving real careful as usual. I begun to read all the Traffic Signs, so as not to bust no laws. I read the sign that says NO U TURN, and the one that says KEEP RIGHT OF CENTER LINE. I read the sign that says SCHOOL GO SLOW and another that says PEDESTRIANS CROSS WALK, and—"

"For heaven sake," I says, "tell me what happened!"

"I'm TELLING you," says Elmer. "I haden't read more than half the Safety Signs on that corner, and I was just reading the one that said KEEP YOUR EYES ON THE ROAD, when all of a sudden I woke up here in the Hospittle."

Mr. Editor, that's why I claim we got too much Safety already. What we need is less rules and more driveing. A red light don't stop a dumb driver, no more than a red budget stops a dumb Congressman.

And it won't do no good to make foolproof cars till somebody invents a car-proof fool.

Yure's truly,
WINSTON NORMAN.

Eat Right; Live Long

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

The average human consumes 50 tons of food in a lifetime, and unless he gets 37 chemicals in his daily portion, he is not eating according to the best standards. Saying this, Dr. Charles Heyd, professor of surgery at Columbia University, goes on to add:

Edwin C. Hill

"Because of wrong food habits, many persons eat themselves into early graves."

Let us get the proper standards of nutrition, he remarks, and we will have a better race—taller, stronger, more intelligent and more handsome. That the United States has become diet-conscious in the last 20 years goes without saying.

Dr. George R. Minot, Harvard's Nobel prize-winner in medicine, commenting on our sudden and fervent interest in calories and vitamins, says:

"The development of knowledge of nutrition has, however, not been entirely beneficial in its application, which is certainly unfortunate, considering that about 15 billion dollars a year are spent for food in the United States alone. The public's enthusiasm for vitamins and minerals illustrates well that 'a little learning is a dangerous thing.'

FOR LONGER LIVES

"In the United States, the essential food elements are abundant and easily procured. Individual low purchasing power plays some role in the production of faulty nutrition, but more often it is due to ignorance of the principles of good nutrition, or to faddism.

"Experience tells us that a mixed diet of natural foodstuffs, one especially rich in milk, green vegetables, fruit, butter, eggs, and food with ample protein of good biological value, gives the best results."

Another scientist from Columbia, Dr. Henry C. Sherman, holds that seven years can be added to the human span of seventy years by a diet which would be adequate in four essentials: calcium, protein, Vitamin A, which promotes growth, and Vitamin G, preventive of pellagra.

In his research, Dr. Sherman has come to the conclusion that for life and health alone all the needed food could consist of only a mixture of five-sixths whole wheat and one-sixth dried milk, plus table salt and distilled water.

When the four essentials for longevity are added to this diet, vitality increases along with the expectation of life.

"DIETS" DISPUTED

Those who go in for reducing should be interested in what still another expert on nutrition, Dr. Milton Bridges, advises:

"It has never been recognized," he says, "that nature or man has been able to produce any such thing as a reducing food. There does not exist any fruit, vegetable, meat, fish or other food which in itself is capable of reducing physical weight as much as one-thousandth of a pound."

It is the doctor's opinion that middle-aged Americans make a mistake when they fail to eat sufficiently of meat, eggs, cheese, fish and gelatins. Lack of protein, induced by such abstinence, makes them anemic.

His statement about the nonexistence of foods which will cut down weight is partly borne out by tests recently concluded at the University of Wisconsin. Three students lived for periods ranging from seven weeks to four months on "mineralized" milk and a little fruit each day. There was no loss of weight.

Finally, if you ask these authorities on diet, they will tell you that most of the old beliefs about food combinations are wrong, that you may eat lobster and ice cream if you wish, that celery doesn't soothe the nerves, that onions don't cure colds, that broth does not give strength and that lettuce will not help you go to sleep.

That's That -:- By Bruce Gustin

Reports that WPA Administrator Hopkins has issued orders to drop one million persons from the work relief rolls unless Congress votes the President a blank relief check for one and one-half billion dollars should not surprise anyone. That is the usual way of "turning the heat" on legislators whenever they begin talking about reducing relief appropriations.

It is a dangerous situation when public spending agencies try to intimidate the law-making body which created them.

Commenting a few days ago on public demonstrations in several states against putting even a one and one-half billion limitation on relief spending, United States Senator Lewis of Illinois said:

"If the conditions continue as they are now threatened, there is no treasure that can be exacted from the public purse and the public pocket than can possibly end the demands.

"It is little less than a form of political cowardice for us to sit silent and allow these people to feel that by this form of hippodrome they can terrorize the Congress into doing that which is a robbery of the citizens.

"We cannot in the name of relief continue to pay patrimony in the form of a gift of the people's money to those who desire exemption from toil or of duty and responsibility to the government."

Senator Lewis voiced one of the strongest pleas which has been made in Congress for a return to sanity in governmental spending when he said:

"We have been making a great error, as I see the situation, in not informing the public that THE UNITED STATES IS NOT A BUREAU CREATED FOR THE DISTRIBUTION OF MONEY TO THOSE WHO MAY DEMAND IT. THIS GOVERNMENT IS NOT A HOUSE OF CHARITY.

"Nor have we the right in the name of what appears to be taxation to drain the citizen of all his possessions, rob business of its chances, and cut off the prospect of the prosperity it seeks.

"How can the employer be put in a position where he can employ idle labor if we take from him his income in a manner that does nothing more than rend it from him in order to distribute it among those who politically terrorize Congress to give it to them?"

There is food for a lot of serious thinking in what Senator Lewis says.

The lower House of Congress did the right thing in adopting an amendment to the relief bill giving American citizens preference over aliens on work relief rolls. That should have been the policy from the start.

As a matter of fact, there is no reason why American citizens ever should have been taxed to provide relief for aliens. The burden of taking care of our own deserving citizens is heavy enough without requiring American taxpayers to take care of foreigners.

The confession of a robber, sentenced to six years in the Nebraska penitentiary, is a testimonial that "CRIME NEVER PAYS." Admitting that he and two accomplices committed 37 robberies and did 28 safe-cracking jobs last winter in Nebraska and South Dakota towns, he told officers "we never made a dime on all the jobs we done. Most of the cash had to be spent for expenses."

An ironical feature of this confession is the statement of the robber that while he was engaged in his career of crime he had to keep his WPA job in Wyoming "to provide for my family."

This must have been a convenient job, also, for the reason that it left him with sufficient time to roam around the country robbing stores and cracking safes.

The plea that "I had to steal to feed my family" is heard frequently. But the story that "I had to keep a relief job to support my family while I was out stealing" is a new one.

The suggestion by President Grace of the Bethlehem Steel Company, "Let's give the consuming public a few billions by reducing taxes," is a splendid one. There is no better example than the steel industry of how taxes are passed on to the consumer.

According to the magazine, Steel Facts, taxes paid by the major steel companies in the last eight years averaged $3.37 a ton on the steel they produced. Government may swing the tax axe at big corporations but the blow falls upon the consumer.

It is too bad that every consumer cannot be given a statement showing how much of the price he pays for each article is taxes. Nothing would be more effective in making the public tax conscious and in convincing every individual that no matter how poor he may be he IS a taxpayer.

There are so many taxes involved in the production of every article it is next to impossible to figure out all of them. But there is no more effective way for any business to campaign for tax relief than by showing its customers as far as it can, how much of the cost of what they buy is represented by taxes.

The adorable Dionne quintuplets are now three years old—the age at which individual characteristics begin to show themselves.

Marie, Cecile, Emile, Yvonne and Annette still look almost exactly alike. But nature, always insisting on differences even in those born in the same hour from the same mother, has already begun, physically, to say to these five miracle children:

"You are different."

The quins do not weigh the same, the greatest difference being between Marie and Annette—a difference of three pounds and a half.

Marie is three-quarters of an inch shorter than Annette and Yvonne. Marie leads in the teething marathon, having 18 teeth. It will be intensely interesting to watch the growth in differences of tastes as they develop.

Nature NEVER repeats—as the quins will prove to the world. And these fortunate little ones will soon know that their millions of dollars will keep growing while they play and sleep.

Alfred Adler, famous Austrian psychologist and originator of the "Inferiority Complex," who just died, was one of those rare teachers who practice what they preach.

His doctrine taught the tremendous power of the human WILL over adverse circumstances and the necessity for the development of INDIVIDUAL CHARACTER and STAMINA.

Adler was a weak child, afflicted with rickets. His parents were too poor to pay for proper treatment. He WILLED health—one means of his development being fights with other boys.

"TO MY CAREER AS A STREET BOY I OWE MUCH THAT LATER IN MY PRIVATE LIFE WAS OF THE GREATEST USE TO ME," said Adler.

He lived to be 67 and became a formidable rival of the great Sigmund Freud.

Theodore Roosevelt was weak and sickly when he was young. He rebuilt himself almost cell for cell by SELF-DISCIPLINE and WILL.

Herbert Spencer, who with Darwin was the father of the Theory of Evolution, was a sickly boy, but he lived to be 83 by DISCIPLINE and WILL. He also said that WILL, SELF-DISCIPLINE and CHARACTER were the real meaning of EDUCATION."

King George will, it is said, issue "letters patent" explaining why the royal family denies the title of Her Highness to the Duchess of Windsor.

These letters patent, of very ancient origin, are so called because they are open for every one to read.

They are the very opposite of the "sealed letters" of royalty. These generally directed the secret apprehension or execution of some one who had fallen under the sovereign's displeasure.

The League of Nations has adopted a resolution condemning "alien invasion" of Spain.

This resolution would have greater weight with thinking people if it were not for the obvious fact that the League itself is an association for the invasion by economic and military "sanctions" of any two nations that may have a dispute.

Elder Held in Gun Case: Court Told He Kissed Girl

By ARTHUR J. QUINN
Boston Evening American Staff Reporter

Greenfield, June 3—Testimony about "peeping" and kissing at Mt. Hermon School for Boys, where the unsolved shotgun murder of Headmaster Elliott Speer occurred in 1934, startled spectators in district court here today.

S. Allen Norton, former cashier at the school, testified he cut a peephole in order to spy on Thomas E. Elder, who was then the dean, and that he saw Dean Elder kiss his secretary, a Miss Dill.

Elder, on trial today for alleged assault with intent to kill the aged Norton with a shotgun on the night of May 25, was held in $10,000 bail for the grand jury after a two-hour session.

The story of the peephole at the famous boys' school came out during cross-examination of Norton, during which the last days of Headmaster Speer were also touched upon.

ADMITS SPYING

After Norton had "positively" identified Elder as his assailant on the night of May 25, the former dean's lawyer went into "bitter feeling" existing between the two

Death Attempt Fails, Man 52, Girl 19 Back

Thirteen days' search for a 52-year-old Wakefield married man and a 19-year-old Wakefield High school girl ended suddenly and dramatically today.

Alson C. Smith of Bellevue avenue drove up to the door of his house, the half-conscious form of Dorothy E. Chase beside him. As waiting police flung open the doors of his car, he said, according to police:

"I wish now I'd finished the job. We were going to death together!"

In the rear of Smith's car, according to police, was a 12-foot length of hose with a coupling to attach it to the exhaust pipe of the automobile.

BREAKS DOWN

Smith broke down, the officers at the scene said, and told them that he and the girl had tried to asphyxiate themselves two hours before on a lonely road near Danvers.

Kidnap, Rob Man of $209 in Own Auto

Kidnaped at gunpoint by a hold-up man who hid in his car while he went into the Norwood Trust Company today, William Koyvu of Millis street, Medfield, was robbed of $209.

The victim of the robbery parked his car near the bank, on Washington street, in the business center of Norwood, while he went in to cash some checks.

When he emerged from the bank he went directly to his car and was driving away when he felt a gun against his back and heard a man's voice say:

"Keep quiet and go just where I tell you."

Nobody on the busy street was aware anything unusual was taking place, as Koyvu drove through the town at gunpoint.

Heeding the commands of his captor, he drove to Oak street, Westwood, where he was ordered to turn into a side road.

VICAR FACES OUSTER BY CHURCH

Copyright, 1937, by International News Service

London, June 3—His bestowal of religious blessings on the wedding of the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Wallis Warfield threatened today to cost the Rev. R. Anderson Jardine, vicar of St. Paul's Church, Darlington, his parish and his future ecclesiastical career.

The liberal-minded little "poor man's parson," who volunteered to marry the duke and Mrs. Warfield in a religious ceremony today, and was accepted for the task, will be summoned before the Parochial Council of St. Paul's at its next meeting at the end of the month.

There he will be "put on the carpet" and asked to explain his failure to consult his ecclesiastical superiors before undertaking to marry the former monarch and the twice-divorced American woman in defiance of Church of England disapproval.

Decision to summon Jardine was reached at an emergency meeting of the council, attended by parish trustees. The vicar's action was hotly condemned and those present appeared to be overwhelmingly in favor of removing the controversial little parson from his post.

The radiantly happy couple left after having been united in a French civil ceremony and the religious service of the Church of England.

Only a small group of guests attended the nuptials and wedding breakfast just 25 weeks after Edward forfeited his crown of England and empire because Wallis Warfield could not be his Queen.

The bridal couple left the chateau by automobile. They were said to be planning to board a special train at the town of Laroche-Migennes. They sent 226 pieces of their baggage ahead.

CROWD CHEERS NEWLYWEDS

The duke and duchess left the chateau after Edward, in a message to the press, had said:

"After the trying time we have been through we now look forward to a happy and useful life and to that measure of peace which we hope will be granted us."

Before they passed through the chateau gates in an automobile driven by George Stanley Ladbrook, Windsor's favorite chauffeur, police cleared the way.

The duchess, sitting on the right side of the closed car, leaned against the open window and waved her handkerchief. The crowd at the castle gates cheered.

Edward sat deep back beside his bride and acknowledged the cheering by nodding his head.

"I will," the supremely happy duke answered in a firm, loud voice to the Anglican poor man's parson who gave him the unsanctioned blessing of the Church of

DUKE'S 'I WILL' EMPHATIC; BRIDE'S VOICE MORE CALM

SHE'S ALL IN WALLIS BLUE AND COSTLY JEWELS

England.

As far as witnesses could see, neither the duke nor anyone else kissed the bride.

DIADEM FOR BRIDE

The duke raised his voice so high in his eagerness to take the "woman I love" as his wife that he startled the 34 guests in the flower-banked music room of this old chateau.

After him, his blue-eyed lady answered "I will." Her voice was just as firm as Edward's, but more hushed.

There was silence when the parson challenged:

"If any man can show any just cause why they may not lawfully be joined together let him now speak or else hereafter forever hold his peace."

The religious service ended at 12:14 p. m. (7:14 a. am. E.D.T.) after the wedding party had come in from highballs and cocktails on the terrace.

This burst of gayety followed roly-poly Dr. Charles Mercier's civil service as mayor of this hamlet. The Anglican preacher who defied his bishops was the Rev. R. Anderson Jardine, "poor man's vicar" of Darlington, England.

The duke gave his bride a beautiful diamond diadem to wear on the brow no crown may adorn.

The American-born Duchess of Windsor, a member now of the British royal family, although by royal decree she must not style herself "Her Royal Highness," was clad in light "Wallis blue"—her husband's favorite shade—from head to foot.

DUKE THANKS GUESTS

Her blue costume was complemented by sparking sapphire bracelets and earrings. From her small straw hat stemmed blue and pink feathers.

After the religious ceremony the duke and duchess led their guests back to the terrace. There, a buffet wedding breakfast had been spread.

Edward made a short speech thanking "all of you people for coming on this occasion so important to us."

The breakfast was a friendly, informal gathering of those who had stayed by the former King's side after the December crisis in which he left his throne.

The bridal couple disappeared for a brief time and then returned to their company.

The duchess had changed to another costume and the duke had doffed his cutaway for a blue serge suit.

Just five minutes after Monts' country physician-mayor began the French civil ceremony in the chateau salon, Wallis Warfield was the Duchess of Windsor, wed to the man who laid aside a crown to share that moment with her.

That was 11:47 a. m. (6:47 a. m., E.D.T.).

The next few minutes were spent in signing civil documents to comply with the French law.

Dr. Mercier, bedecked in his red, white and blue sash of office, self-consciously handed the papers to the Monts town crier, who stuck them in an old leather case and bicycled feverishly back to the town hall.

"By one of those whims of destiny," the mayor told the bridal couple, "it is under the blue sky and among the flowers of the garden of France, in the laughing valley of the Indre, that the most moving of all idylls has just unfolded itself . . .

MANY HEARTS CELEBRATE

"The illustrious wedding which innumerable hearts will celebrate in secret today had for its celebrant the mayor of a little town of Touraine . . .

"In saluting in its name of a prince who was the well-beloved sovereign of a friendly people, and she whom His Highness has chosen from a noble country to which we are attached with the same precious bonds—greatness and glory, permit him who has just received the mutual consent uniting your destinies to give you . . . the most sincere wishes for your happiness . . ."

When the couple re-entered the turretted chateau from the terrace during the cocktail interim between services they went separately to the music room.

BEFORE GOLDEN CROSS

The Rev. Mr. Jardine, his glasses on his nose, stood beside the hastily improvised altar—made up of borrowings from neighborhood churches—wearing his white surplice and waiting to read the service.

He performed the service without the authority of the church, which does not like remarriage after divorce. He did it, he said, on the authority of his conscience alone.

Edward, accompanied by his best man, Major Metcalfe, came up the corridor from the dining room where the guests were assembled.

He stood bfore the altar, in the center of which stood a two-foot golden cross.

A moment later, Herman L. Rogers, steadfast American friend of the couple, escorted in the bride.

Soft notes came from the organ as Marcel Dupre played a wedding prelude. It made a peaceful setting f - a wedding of such note.

ALL THE DUKE'S NAMES

The Rev. Mr. Jardine immediately began reading the marriage ceremony. He took it from the Church of England's old book of common prayer.

Calling the duke by all his given names, the vicar asked:

". . . Edward Albert Christian George Andrew Patrick David . . . wilt thou love her, comfort her, honor her and keep her? . . ."

"I will," the duke answered loudly.

The minister than asked the duchess, calling her "Bessie Wallis," if she would "obey, serve, love and honor."

The bride, repeating after the parson, answered in steady, hushed voice:

". . . And to obey until death do us part."

"WITH ALL MY GOODS"

Windsor, also following the minister's reading, took the wedding ring of Welsh gold from the Rev. Mr. Jardine and slipped it on his bride's finger.

"With this ring I thee wed," Edward said, ". . . and with all my worldly goods I thee endow . . ."

The vicar called upon the assemblage to pray, asking that God give His blessing "to this man and to this woman."

"May they remain in perfect love and peace together," he added.

"Those whom God has joined together let no man put asunder . . . I pronounce that they be man and wife together, in the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost. Amen."

It was exactly 12:14 p. m. (7:14 a. m., E. D. T.) when Edward and Wallis rose, man and wife, from the white satin cushion on which they had knelt to receive the church's unwilling blessing.

SIX-STORY WEDDING CAKE

Now the guests rose and headed for the long table that was crowded with trays of lobster, baked ham, pastries and other delicacies for the buffet wedding breakfast.

In the center of the table, surmounting the whole array, was a great six-story wedding cake trimmed with white frosted forget-me-nots.

Champagne was passed to all the guests and Major Metcalfe proposed a toast to th happiness of the newly-maried couple.

The bridegroom, in bubbling spirits all morning long, was as self-conscious as a boy at graduation when his friends called upon him to speak.

He shifted first to one foot and then to the other, abashed and at a loss for words.

He just thanked his guests for coming.

Leaving their wraps in an anteroom, the guests first were escorted by Rogers into the large salon where the civil ceremony was performed entirely in French and before only 13 persons—including the duke and duchess.

It was 10 minutes before the duke, the first of the bridal couple to arrive, came into the room.

Dr. Mercier, smiling, affable and apparently a trifle uncomfortable in his broad sash of office with gold tassels, already was there.

The guests were all introduced and chatted briefly until assigned by Rogers to chairs.

Placed directly before a long table at the east end of the room were four chairs where the bride, the bridegroom, Rogers and Metcalfe sat.

About 12 feet behind them were five others chairs where Mrs. Rogers, Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, the duchess' "Aunt Bessie," Bertrand, Vernet and Graham sat. The newspapermen's chairs were slightly to one side.

The table was covered with a dark yellow cloth. At both ends were big vases with pink and white peonies.

The salon in the centuries-old castle provided a rich setting. The walls were covered with dark red cloth. On them hung three paintings of horses and a big oil of the resurrection. On another table was a bunch of flowers bound by a ribbon stamped with a chain of American flags.

WOMEN IN FINERY

Over the big stone fireplace on the south side of the room—which is about 40 feet by 20 feet—stood another huge bouquet of peonies. Under a window at the opposite end a third table was banked with vases of mixed red, blue, yellow and white flowers. One of its bouquets was a large bunch of lilies.

The carpeting of red, green and blue covered the whole floor in a neat, small pattern.

Through the window the guests could see out over the lush, spacious gardens that stretch down a beautiful embankment to the shore of a small lake.

Mrs. Rogers wore an ensemble consisting of a printed gown and a long, navy blue crepe coat topped with a large straw hat of navy blue.

"Aunt Bessie" wore a printed dress and a blue felt hat. Each had a lavender orchid at the waist.

The duke walked into the room alone at 11:41 a. m. (6:41 a. m., E. S. T.).

He was smiling happily and looking well rested as he circled among his guests, shaking hands with all of them.

WALLY IN JEWELS

In the moment before his bride joined him, Edward spent most of his time chatting with Graham. He seemed much interested when the consul, who once held a post in Ecuador, mentioned it.

"Oh, yes," the duke said, "I know South America very well. I have never been in Ecuador, but I have been in La Paz (Bolivia). That's terribly high, too, you know."

Mrs. Warfield came in then, wearing her gown of "Wallis blue."

The duchess' wedding dress was cut on almost severely simple lines. It came up high in front. At her neck she wore a glittering sapphire brooch. From her left wrist sparkled a sapphire bracelet. Her earrings matched the bejeweled ensemble.

Her hat, shoes and gloves were of the same shade of blue as her dress. Her hat was of a toque style with the pink and blue feathers in front and topped by a "halo" of blue tulle.

Dr. Mercier, proceeding immediately with the ceremony informed the new duchess she was obliged to obey her husband and follow him wherever he might go. He told the duke he must provide for all his wife's needs.

When the mayor asked Windsor if he accepted Mrs. Warfield as his wife, the bridegroom nodded slightly and answered:

"Oui."

During the civil ceremony Edward kept his hands behind his back, alternately clasping and unclasping his fingers.

Mrs. Warfield gave her residence as Cannes.

Edward reflectively stroked his chin while his wife signed the marriage register and the British consular record.

The room where the religious ceremony took place was decorated with white peonies and lilies placed in vases in profusion along the walls.

The altar was made of an old oaken chest, part of the chateau's furnishings.

It had been erected in an alcove opening on the room. At the ends of the altar were single, tall, yellow tapers and in the middle the golden cross.

IN CANDLES' GLOW

Beside the altar were two large candelabras each containing 62 candles. At the back of the room a large mirror—with one white candle at either end—covered most of the wall.

A big, brass chandelier was suspended from the center of the ceiling. Yellow silken curtains covered the windows.

The clergyman entered the room just two minutes after noon. He stood for a moment with his head bowed before the altar while the organ played and a bright sun flooded the improvised chapel with brilliant light.

A minute later Edward came in with Metcalfe and in another minute the Duchess of Windsor entered on the arm of Rogers.

The service started without delay:

'We are come together here in the sight of God and this congregation to join this man and woman," the Rev. Mr. Jardine started reading from his red-covered prayer book while the couple stood before him.

After the religious services the bridal couple went to the steps of the chateau to be photographed, alone and then with their witnesses.

2:15 p. m. (9:15 a. m., E. S. T.) the guests had started leaving. The Baron and Baroness Eugene de Rothschild, who were the last to arrive, were the first to leave. They were followed shortly by Prefect Vernet.

Dr. Mercier, beaming as he reached the outer gate, stopped to say:

"The wedding was a very impressive ceremony."

He did not say whether he meant his own or the Rev. Mr. Jardine's service.

The smiling Mme. Mercier said only:

"It was very touching."

After taking his wife home, the mayor returned to the chateau. He stayed only a few moments. Apparently he had forgotten some of the legal papers to which the erstwhile Mrs. Warfield had affixed the signature, "Duchess of Windsor."

Some of the guests left carrying their slices of the towering wedding cake on which the chateau's chefs had lavished a week of attention. All who have families were given extra slices for their children.

THANK NEWSPAPERMEN

The duke, married man now at 43, played the happy role of genial host. After the double ceremony he summoned some of the newspapermen who had stayed with him in his months of travel in exile."

After a spokesman for them congratulated the newlyweds, Windsor answered:

"Thank you very much for your good wishes. I was very sorry I could not have you all to the wedding but there was not room."

The duchess, standing happily beside her third husband, shook hands as each of the correspondents was presented.

The bridegroom mingled among all his guests, passing informally from one group to another, handshaking with all.

Those he suspected of shyness he escorted personally to the table piled high with lobster and chicken-a-la-king, urging them to eat heartily.

"Why didn't you take something to eat?" he asked. "You know it's there to eat, not just to look at."

Back roads leading to the chateau were closed up quickly by the gendarmes.

BAGGAGE LEAVES

Just about that time, in the road near Cande, French-style "hot dog" stands made their appearance. They did a rushing trade, mostly in bananas and hot coffee.

At 8:25 a. m., Mrs. Warfield's American motor car and a small truck piled with trunks and suitcases left the chateau, bound for Tours. There, the baggage was put aboard a train for the honeymoon castle of Wasserleonburg, in Austria.

Several elderly natives, in sombre black, were hustled away from the gates of the chateau soon after 8:30.

Marie Emilie Brault, the 65-year-old gatekeeper, told them:

"No outsiders will see the ceremony, not even I."

"This is the happiest day of my life," the former King announced to those around the table. When he referred to his smiling fiancee:

"Nothing is too expensive for her. I have tried to make this the happiest time of her life."

With the Rev. Mr. Jardine's blessing upon them, the Duke and the Duchess (she could not be denied that distinction) looked expectantly to a motor car and train trip tonight to their rented Wasserleonburg Castle, a landmark of antiquity under the towering Alpine heights, near Noetsch, Austria.

After Wasserleonburg, there may be a world cruise—America perhaps, even England again. The Duke leased the castle from the German Count Paul Muenster for three months.

MARRIAGE CONTRACT FILED

While the royal romance came to climatic flower, Ernest Aldrich Simpson, the London ship broker, whom Mrs. Warfield divorced, pursued the even tenor of his way in London, sticking close to business and friends in the Guards' Club.

Today there was a wedding ring of Welsh gold to grace the hand of the ship broker's former wife—in the tradition of the British royal family.

A marriage contract, signed two and one-half weeks ago, but kept secret, was understood on good authority to provide for complete separation of Edward's and Wallis' property. The document will remain on file in the office of a Tours notary public.

Another bit of picturesque routine attaching to the French civil marriage was the delivery by Monts' mayor of the "Livret De Famille," a little book which gives instructions drawn up by the Academy of Medicine on how to raise children.

'Poor Man's Parson' Faces Church Ban

CALLED BEFORE HIGH COUNCIL

PRELATES CONDEMN ACT

Church of England considered severe disciplinary action against Jardine. If carried out, the action under contemplation would be likely to result in virtual ostracism of the vicar, it was said.

The Rev. Herbert Goldsmith, rural dean of Darlington and Jardine's immediate superior, issued a scathing statement denouncing the vicar's failure to consult with church authorities before making his spectacular decision to assist the Duke.

"The Rev. Mr. Jardine did not consult me once during his 10 years at St. Paul's," the statement said. "He does not mix with other clergy and is a man of unorthodox views, which have often brought him into conflict with church authorities."

Goldsmith is now conversing with the Bishop of Durham, to whom Jardine is answerable, and the Bishop of Fulham, who is in charge of Church of England parishes abroad, as well as the Archbishop of Canterbury, who threatened to remove any parson from his post who should participate in a religious wedding for the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Warfield.

These high church authorities are discussing what disciplinary actions will be taken against Jardine. Although they are not empowered to excommunicate him for the deed, it is believed they will publicly disavow him and his part in the wedding.

ANGER MORE EVIDENT

The anger of high church dignitaries became more evident than ever when the Bishop of Fulham, with the concurrence of the Bishop of London, sent a telegram to Jardine at Monts, France, protesting against his action "without episcopal license or consent."

The telegram protested against the irregularity of the proceedings, "which contravene the laws of the Church of England."

As soon as he heard of Jardine's action, the Bishop of Fulham rushed to London to consult with the Bishop of London. The latter has jurisdiction over Anglican chaplains in north and central Europe.

The bishop declared the vicar had no right whatever to bestow the church's blessing on the marriage of the duke and Mrs. Warfield.

AGAINST CHURCH CANONS

The canons of the Anglican Church do not permit church rites to solemnize the marriage of a person who has been previously married and has a spouse still living.

Thus, said the bishop, Jardine is incapable of legally solemnizing the marriage under the circumstances.

He added he had not in any way authorized a religious service for the duke's wedding.

It was learned that the bishop's telegram of protest to Jardine was sent on instructions of the Archbishop of Canterbury. But it appeared evident that the vicar was prepared to go on with the ceremony, even if it means he is thrown out of the church.

"PRESBYTER VAGANS"

The bishop of Fulham said Jardine is what is known technically as "presbyter vagans." His position in the wedding ceremony is that of a private person who has been invited "to say prayers."

A stacment was issued by the chaplain to the Bishop of London, saying:

"This statement is issued wih authority of the Archbishop of Canterbury, who has been in consultation with the Bishop of London and the Bishop of Fulham.

"If it be true that the Rev. Jardine has undertaken to perform a religious ceremony in connection with the marriage of the Duke of Windsor, the Bishop of Fulham, who has jurisdiction over the Anglican Church in France, wishes it to be known that this action of an Anglican clergyman has been taken without his knowledge or consent."

ASKS FULL PENALTY

The Bishop of Southwell, speaking at a diocesan conference at Nottingham, entered the fray with these words:

"I deplore that the civil marriage of divorced persons controversy should come to a head at this time . . . The church abhors any weakening of the marriage bond and excommunication should follow the civil marriage of divorced persons."

"COURTESY" CEREMONY

Another high church authority said the religious rites at the Chateau De Cande will be considered merely a "courtesy ceremony."

This source claimed that the rotund little pastor, who faces a possible dismissal from his pulpit, did not legally solemnize the marriage, irrespective of how full a ceremony he may conduct.

It was contended he was merely conferring a religious blessing on a Protestant couple who have already been married by French civil law.

All Anglican chaplains in Europe were informed by their superiors some time ago that it was possible they would be asked to officiate at the marriage in the Chateau De Cande. The Bishop of Fulham disclosed that he had given instructions to his chaplains to refuse to participate in the wedding. He said these orders were obeyed by the Continental chaplains, only to be flouted by a minister in England itself.

Speculating on what punishment the Rev. Jardine might expect when he returns to his vicarage at Darlington, one noted ecclesiastical lawyer said:

"As the ceremony was not taking place in a church it's inhibition was imposible. Also, the diocesan Bishop cannot take action as the clergyman concerned does not normally hold preferment within his diocese, but he can report Jardine to his own bishop of Durham."

The lawyer pointed out that only on the special license of the Archbishop of Canterbury can the Church of England marriage ceremony be performed abroad in a place not consecrated for the purpose. He said that today's ceremony, therefore, would have no legal standing by Church of England laws in so far as the religious rites are concerned.

However, he continued, inasmuch as the religious ceremony follows a legal civil wedding there is doubt whether any bishop would care to take action against any clergyman who gave the church blessing to any married couple in the Protestant faith.

Rev. Jardine's superiors were quick to disavow any responsibility for his sensational decision to read the marriage vows over the famous couple. The Bishop of Fulham, who has jurisdiction in Monts, conferred with the Archbishop of Canterbury and stated:

"Rev. Jardine acted without my consent or knowledge."

The Bishop of Durham, his immediate superior, took a similar stand, and recalled that he had been forced to rebuke Rev. Jardine on several occasions for his liberal views on church matters—once for preaching in a Wesleyan chapel again for conducting a mission in a Methodist church.

'Timetable' Of Wally Wedding

Chateau de Cande, Monts, France, June 3 (AP)—Edward of Windsor's wedding present to the American woman who became his bride was disclosed by friends today to be a diadem of diamonds.

The wedding day—her third—began at 8 a. m. for Wallis Warfield when she stepped into filmy lingerie of powder blue.

At 8:15 a. m. Antonio, her hairdresser, arranged her coiffure.

At 10 a. m. precisely Mrs. Warfield stood fully costumed in her light blue wedding gown. She wore a small blue straw toque trimmed with pink and blue feathers.

At 11:42 she tremulously took her place beside the man who gave up the world's greatest throne so he could make her his bride—if not his queen.

At 11:47 chubby Mayor Charles Mercier pronounced them man and wife.

Visibly upset were the high prelates of the Church of England today as Rev. R. The official protest against the "rebel" parson was forwarded from archbishop to bishops and then to the officiating clergyman in the above manner.

International News Photograph Service

FOR HIS 'KING'

By THE REV. R. ANDERSON JARDINE

Monts, France, June 3 (US)—I offered to officiate in a Church of England ceremony for the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Warfield of my own volition and without asking permission.

It is not necessary to get permission from anyone.

I deemed it my Christian duty to do as I am doing. I volunteered my services in a letter to the Duke. The Duke accepted.

I don't recall exactly what I said in the letter, except that I was willing to give a holy blessing to the union of my former King and his bride.

IF I LOSE MY FLOCK AND PULPIT IN DARLINGTON FOR HAVING BLESSED THE DUKE AND THE AMERICAN LADY IN THEIR MARRIAGE, I AM WILLING TO UNDERGO THIS SACRIFICE FOR THE SAKE OF DOING MY DUTY AS I SEE IT.

I knew the Duke wanted a religious service. I knew Mrs. Warfield wanted it. And to me it's unthinkable that any member of the royal family should be married outside the Church of England.

With my conscience as my guide and my Christian duty to perform, I made my decision. Now I have new hope in my heart. I think the people of England want them married religiously.

Hint Jardine To Be Duke's Chaplain

London, June 3 (AP)—A poor man's parson who chose to marry his former King and Wallis Warfield, no matter what the bishops thought, stirred a tempest in the Anglican Church today and even provoked the question:

"Will he go to work for Windsor now?"

Many churchmen throughout the land were horrified because the Anglican vicar of Darlington, the Rev. R. Anderson Jardine, had defied his superiors to bless the union.

But the man in the street was deeply stirred to hear that the democratic former monarch would, after all, be married within the church of which he once was titular head.

CLUB Simpson's HAVEN

SCOFFS AT HIS NEWS VALUE

London, June 3 (AP)—The wedding day of Wallis Warfield and the Duke of Windsor was just another day at the office for Ernest Aldrich Simpson, the new duchess' second husband.

He lunched at one of London's chop houses. At some tables nearby, people were reading the latest editions of newspapers with large pictures of the former King and his American-born bride.

But nobody, apparently, noticed Simpson, nobody disturbed his meal.

In a bowler hat and well-tailored business suit, he stays in the protective depths of the Guard's Club, 41 Brook street, or else London's crowds swallow him up if he emerges to go to office or theater. He describes himself: "Of very poor news value, I'm afraid."

It has been that way since Ship's Broker Simpson and his wife went their separate ways last October; she to the Ipswich divorce court, he to "The Guards."

Once in a while in the last few weeks, this dark-haired, moustached man has met one of the old friends who also is a friend of Wallis Warfield, and the friend has said very casually:

"I spoke to Wallis on the telephone yesterday."

"Oh, you did?" Simpson would say, with a smile. "And how is she—all right, I hope?"

Duke Aids in Cutting Cake

Joy Bubbles Over at Wedding Breakfast

Monts, France, June 3 (INS)—"Where's my husband?"

These words from the lips of the new Duchess of Wirdson floated out over the terrace of the Chateau de Cande today and sent the world's most famous bridegroom running to his wife's side to help her cut the wedding cake.

The Duke participated in a round of toasts at the wedding breakfast table, then repaired to the terrace for a cup of tea with the Rev. R. Anderson Jardine, who performed the marriage ceremony.

When he rejoined the breakfast party, the Duke found the Duchess standing with a carving knife poised above the wedding cake. While she guided the knife, he applied the pressure.

CAKE FOR ABSENTEES

Most brides cut only the first slice, but the duchess did a workmanlike job, spending 15 minutes slicing the cake and wrapping pieces for absentees, including the Rev. Mr. Jardine's four children and the twins of Lady Metcalfe, wife of the duke's best man.

Wreathed in smiles, the duke and duchess received American, English, French and Scandinavian reporters during the afternoon. Herman L. Rogers introduced the couple, standing on the steps of the chateau, to the separate groups of journalists.

For his long services as the duke's press liaison man, Rogers was given a gold fountain pen by the correspondents.

JOY BUBBLES OVER

Happiness of the duke and duchess bubbled over like the champagne which surrounded their wedding breakfast table.

The bridegroom laughed and tossed gibes at his friends—especially Major Dudley Metcalfe, who raised his glass in the first toast to the couple.

"Long live the happiness of His Royal Highness, the Duke of Windsor, and his lady," said Major Metcalfe.

"I didn't know Fruity could make such a speech," was the duke's rejoinder.

Wallis' first act after congratulations were received was to thank Mrs. Spry, who came from London to take charge of the decorations, in private. Both the newlyweds then thanked chateau servants, one of whom stood in an antechamber and heard the services.

The duke seemed almost bewildered with happiness. At first he wanted to cut the wedding cake, standing in eight tiers three feet high, but when he started to look for a knife he was persuaded to defer the cutting until after the first round of "bubbly."

Randolph Churchill's frock coat was the only one in the gathering, the duke noted, and he "kidded" the young man about the fact that he is "on his own" for a year on $1000 wager.

"What do you do about champagne?" he asked Churchill. Grinning, Churchill replied that he did not drink.

WEDDING DAY WEATHER IDEAL

MONTS IN ITS SUNDAY BEST

Chateau de Cande, Monts, France, June 3 (AP)—Sunny weather fit for the wedding of any king—or former king—came today to old Touraine to grace the wedding of Edward, Duke of Windsor, and Wallis Warfield.

There was scarcely a cloud in the soft,, blue sky.

From nearby Tours, delivery trucks early rolled up the gravelled lanes to the Chateau de Cande's kitchens. They bore fresh vegetables, milk and bread to feed the faithful gathered for the wedding of the man who was King—and his lady in blue.

With them came debonair Antonio of Paris, hairdresser elite. It was his proud job to trim and wash His Highness' hair.

The villagers of Monts (they look upon Edward and his sweetheart as the first citizens of their hamlet) turned out in their Sunday best. They strolled along the winding road outside the chateau's gates, chatting with neighbors and boasting to the tourists who came, too, from far away.

POLICE RULE CROWDS

These people knew they would see nothing at all of the wedding—Monts was figuratively knee-deep in gendarmes, to keep them well outside the chateau grounds.

They were picked police, led by ranking officers, resplendent in new blue uniforms and polished boots.

They worked with military precision. Motorcycle riders patrolled every road.

Monts came out of doors from breakfast to find house after house bedecked with French and British flags. On many were plaques—"Happines to Windsor and Mrs. Warfield."

Back roads leading to the chateau were closed up quickly by the gendarmes.

Just about that time, in the road near Cande, French-style "hot dog" stands did a rushing trade, mostly in bananas and hot coffee.

HONEYMOON IN ALPS

At 8:25 a. m., Mrs. Warfield's American motor car and a small truck piled with trunks and suitcases left the chateau, bound for Tours. There, the baggage was put aboard a train for the honeymoon castle of Wasserleonburg, in Austria.

Several elderly natives in somber black were hustled away from the gates of the chateau soon after 8:30.

Marie Emilie Brault, the 65-year-old gatekeeper, told them:

"No outsiders will see the ceremony, not even I."

Mme. Brault, white-haired and whimsical, has had the say-so about who goes in the gate for 45 years. Today she was in her best ceremonial black, topped by a white bonnet. There were brand new felt slippers on her feet.

Finally she called on her daughter Germaine to help shoo the curious from the gates.

226 PIECES OF LUGGAGE

Nevertheless, a group of English tourists who brought strawberries and champagne to toast the newlyweds from outside the gates managed to hide them in the moss near the chateau walls to keep them cool.

Later on, from Tours, came word that exactly 226 pieces of luggage were necessary to transport the clothing and toilet articles of the duke and his duchess from Cande to the honeymoon castle.

Of these, 183 trunks go into the train's baggage car. The couple intended to have a dozen overnight bags in their private car with them. The rest were sent to Austria yesterday.

Practically the first of the castle party to show himself, the Duke of Windsor, dressed in a lounge suit, took a walk on the terrace during the morning.

Mrs. Warfield did not appear.

Said a French police official:

"The duke is radiant; the very image of happiness!"

He had talked to Edward about police protection on the honeymoon tour.

IN COLORFUL SPLENDOR

A final checkup by police officials on the cordon of police and detectives around the chateau was made an hour before the wedding. Their blue uniforms, resplendent with gold, silver and yellow braid, brought a flash of color to the scene—a scant hint of the pageant that would have been Edward's had he married as king.

The floor of the salon and music room—settings for the two marriage rituals—were swept with a rough farm broom of birch branches to clear away a scattering of flower petals which dropped overnight from the many vases.

Bartenders and butlers bustled about in preparation for post-wedding gaiety, making ready to serve 37 varieties of drinks.

Three hundred persons, mostly newspaper men, were massed before the main gates. Police reinforcements arrived there to handle the growing throng. A squad of steel-helmeted mobile guards was posted directly in front of the entrance.

Tech Youth Killed, 3 Hurt in Crash

George F. Campbell, 19, of Evanville, Ill., Massachusetts Institute of Technology student, was killed and three other persons, one a Lynn woman, were injured when the car in which they were riding went out of control on the Cherry Valley Turnpike south of Syracuse, N. Y.

The injured were William L. Morrison, Jr., 18 of Lake Forest, Ill., and Barrett Burnell, 18, of Flint, Mich., both M. I. T. student, and Mrs. Allie James, 54, of Seymour avenue, Lynn, Burnell's great-aunt.

Wally Bows To Ancient Tradition

Monts, France, June 2 (US)—Mrs. Wallis Warfield, observing an old superstition, was married to the Duke of Windsor today with "something old, something new, something borrowed and something blue."

The "old" was a bit of Alencon lace worked into the bride's slip. The "new" was a coin minted in the former King's reign but never circulated. The "borrowed" was a handkerchief of her aunt, Mrs. D. B. Merryman. The "blue" was the new Wallis blue color of her dress.

Mrs. Warfield defied another superstition; that the bride should never see the bridegroom on the day of her wedding until she meets him at the ceremony. She saw the Duke at breakfast before they began to dress for the occasion.

Here's Duke's New 'Wally Cocktail'

Chateau De Cande, Monts France, June 3 (AP)—Here's how the Duke of Windsor makes the "Wallis cocktail" he concocted in celebration of his wedding:

One jigger of Cointreau
One jigger of peppermint
Two jiggers of gin
Juice of half a lemon
Soda and ice.

The duke had the cocktails served to pre-nuptial dinner guests last night.

WALLY Wed in Blue GOWN

TROUSSEAU GLAMOROUS

Chateau De Cande, Monts, France, June 3 (AP)—Mrs. Wallis Warfield wore a soft silk gown of "Wallis blue" today for her marriage to the Duke of Windsor—a glamorous creation in sweeping lines that accentuated her statuesque figure.

The former Baltimore girl's attire, including the whole spectacular array of line and color embodied in her trousseau, promised to sway the style for brunettes.

The soft color of the wedding garment, in the mode of an afternoon dress, with jacket, was offset by the gay pink of feathers trimming her blue straw hat.

"Wallis blue" is an "individual" shade between medium and pastel.

The bride's deep blue eyes, say fashion experts, are one of her greatest charms. Her figure is slender but rounded. Her waist is slim and curving—about 26 inches, with trim hipline.

New trunks and old ones, carted from Cannes to Monts in the wake of her exodus from the Azure coast, are crammed with her honeymoon clothes.

BLUE TRAVEL SUIT

Outside the trunks is the going-away suit—a dark blue travel outfit, straight lined, with a blouse in blue and white crepe.

Evening dresses especially are piled high in the trunks. Among them is a white crepe marocain ensemble, by Mainbocher, to be worn with a glorified cardigan jacket spangled in white, black and sapphire blue. The spangles stripe the jacket in diagonal pattern. There is a draped neck to the high-cut dress, and short sleeves.

Some dark evening dresses are accented with contrasting color. A honeymoon dinner frock is a sheath of black crepe, very slimming, made with slightly low neck in scalloped outline. Following the scallops around are four tiny frills of flesh pink mousseline, and the long, tight sleeves are frilled with pink at the wrists.

Crepe romain, in the bride's well-loved navy blue, makes another dinner dress. It is girdled with polka dotted surah silk. The girdle finishes in a lovers' knot at the front. A bolero jacket of the dotted silk goes along.

DEMANDS STRAIGHT SKIRTS

Another jacketed ensemble is in printed crepe of violet-blue ground, over a rustling petticoat massed with blue taffeta frills.

Two things this Baltimore-bred bride insists upon are straight skirts and frocks with belts. No princess-fitted waists or full flared lines for her slight figure.

A white lace dress in this overflowing trousseau is a straight sheath, with short sleeves and a bateau neck. The roses in the lace pattern are outlined with red, and bunches of them are cut out to trim the sleeves and make a flower cluster at the knee.

Furs include a short cape of "frix," a blue fox strikingly divided into two colors. Five "frix" skins, arranged vertically, are mounted by Paquin on brown georgette to make a smart little cape just covering the waistline. This keeps company in the honeymoon luggage with her glamorous silver fox, knee-length coat from Molyneux.

HAS MANY BLOUSES

For day wear there are navy blue wool suits with white blouses and grey flannel suits with blue blouses. A grey suit has a short fitted jacket with square neck, overlaid with applique scrolls of soft material. Cornflower-blue crepe de chine fashions the blouse for this, and it is made with high neck and short sleeves.

Today, as in the quiet months she waited for Edward, the new Duchess wears her hair parted in the middle, waved deeply at the sides and drawn down in back into a soft "chignon." No curls marked the classic serenity of this marital coiffure.

Her skin is clear and fresh, her make-up lightly done, and her manicured nails naturally colored, innocent of high tint or lacquer. Just one ring of late has graced her slender hand, a gorgeous oblong sapphire worn on her engagement finger. Today a wedding band of Welsh gold was placed there, too.

All Royal Family Stays at Home

London, June 3 (AP)—Members of the British royal family stayed at home, at least officially, today.

Neither King George VI nor any other member of the circle had any scheduled public appearances on the day of the Duke of Windsor's wedding to Wallis Warfield.

This sudden seeming retreat from public gaze, after most of the family had appeared at Epsom yesterday for the Derby, caused considerable comment.

Some thought the King might be returning Windsor's gesture of May 12—then the duke, during George's coronation, stayed in strict seclusion at the Chateau de Cande.

Others suggested apprehension lest the day bring forth embarrassing incidents, such as that of coronation day, when a man in Whitehall shouted:

"England rejoices while King Edward VIII lives in exile!"

AMERICAN WHOSE ROMANCE ROCKED HALF A WORLD

'The Woman I Love'

MAN WHO GIVES UP EVERYTHING EXCEPT LOVE

DUCHESS OF WINDSOR

A King's Farewell

The man who abdicated as ruler of the empire he loved for the woman he loved more made that woman his wife today.

Not even the act of abdication was more poignantly dramatic than former King Edward's farewell to the British people in his world-wide radio broadcast last December 11, the day after he renounced the throne for the love of Wallis Warfield.

That explanation of his choice between the throne and the woman who could not be his queen—"the woman I love"—is reprinted herewith:

"At long last I am able to say a few words of my own. I have never wanted to withhold anything but until now it has not been constitutionally possible for me to speak.

"A few hours ago I discharged my last duty as King and Emperor. And now that I have been succeeded by my brother, the Duke of York, my first words must be to declare my allegiance to him. This I do with all my heart.

"You know the reasons which have impelled me to renounce the throne, but I want you to understand that in making up my mind I did not forget the country or the empire which, as Prince of Wales and lastly as a King, I have for 25 years tried to serve.

"But you must believe me when I tell you that I have found it impossible to carry the heavy burden of responsibility and to discharge my duties as King, as I would wish to do, without the help and support of the woman I love.

"And I want you to know that the decision I have made has been mine and mine alone.

"This was a thing I had to judge entirely for myself. The other person most nearly concerned has tried up to the last to persuade me to take a different course.

"I have made this the most serious decision of my life only upon the single thought of what would, in the end, be best for all.

"This decision has been made less difficult to me by the sure knowledge that my brother, with his long training in the public affairs of this country and with his fine qualities, will be able to take my place forthwith without interruption or injury to the life and progress of the Empire. And he has one matchless blessing, enjoyed by so many of you and not bestowed to me, a happy home with his wife and children.

"During these hard days I have been comforted by Her Majesty, my mother, and by my family. The Ministers of the Crown and in particular Mr. Baldwin, the Prime Minister, have always treated me with full consideration.

"There have never been any constitutional differences between me and them and between me and Parliament.

"Bred in the constitutional traditions by my father, I should never have allowed any such issue to arise.

"Ever since I was Prince of Wales and later on, when I occupied the throne, I have been treated with the greatest kindness by all classes of the people wherever I have lived or journeyed throughout the Empire.

"For that I am very grateful. I now quit altogether public affairs and I lay down my burden.

"It maybe some time before I return to my native land, but I shall always follow the fortunes of the British race and Empire with profound interest, and if, at any time in the future, I can be found of service to His Majesty in a private station I shall not fail.

"And now we all have a new King. I wish him and you, his people, happiness and prosperity with all my heart.

"God bless you all! God save the King!"

DUKE OF WINDSOR

TALK By Mayor to DUKE

VOICES HIGH BRIDAL HONOR

Chateau De Cande, Monts, France, June 3 (AP)—Following is the text of the address which Mayor Charles Mercier of Monts delivered today to Edward of Windsor and Wallis Warfield after he had made them man and wife.

"Your Highness, Your Grace:

"By one of those whims of destiny, it is under the blue sky and among the flowers of the garden of France, in the laughing valley of the Indre, that the most moving of all idylls has just unfolded itself.

HIS GREAT HONOR

"Behind the foliage of the hundred years-old park of the unassuming Chateau de Cande, in a setting which Monsieur and Madame Bedaux (the American owners) could not have better prepared if they had foreseen the great event which was to occur there, the illustrious wedding which innumerable hearts will celebrate in secret today has for its celebrant the mayor of a little town of Touraine.

"He would be unworthy of the great honor which falls to him if he was not aware, in fulfilling the rites and the laws of his country, that he represents at this simple but august ceremony a nation which has always been charmed by chivalrous and bold acts dictated by the heart.

WITH BEST WISHES

"In saluting in its name a prince who was the well-beloved sovereign of a friendly people and she whom his highness has chosen from a noble country to which we are attached with the same precious bonds—greatness and glory—permit him who has just received the mutual consent uniting your destinies to give you, in the name of his fellow countrymen and in his own name, the most sincere wishes for your happiness, a happiness the dawn of which the commune of Monts sees rising on this memorable day of June 3, 1937.

"To these wishes I add a hope:

"To see you often on Touraine's soil. Your presence is as welcomed by us as it is an honor to us. Your highness, your grace, we rejoice in your happiness."

Joint Gift From King and Queen

Monts, France, June 3 (INS)—Among the hundreds of wedding gifts for the Duke and Duchess of Windsor stacked in neat array in the Chateau de Cande today were presents from each member of the British royal family.

King George and Queen Elizabeth sent a joint present, the nature of which was not disclosed.

All of the duke's other relatives sent gifts also, including little Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose.

LONDON PRESS GIVES ALL BRIDAL DETAILS

London, June 3 (AP)—The empire that former King Edward VIII forsook for love today read avidly of the wedding he preferred to a crown.

London newspapers broke their recent reticence about the Duke of Windsor and gave full attention to the Chateau de Cande ceremonies that united him in marriage with Wallis Warfield.

Under full length portraits of the duke and his new duchess in their wedding attire, the press gave the British public front-page details of the nuptials.

An unhappy note was sounded, however, by simultaneous newspaper accounts of protests by Church of England bishops against the Rev. R. Anderson Jardine's independent action in performing a religious ceremony for the duke and his twice divorced bride.

Along with complete details of the wedding, the Liberal London Star published a scathing editorial on "the church's attitude," in which it criticized Anglican bishops for a "lack of charity."

"No one contests the right of bishops to maintain discipline within the church or to express their views on marriage. But the hard rancorous tone of these statements will, we believe, shock the public," the editorial said.

"Every sentiment of generosity to the fallen idol, of Christian forgiveness and of good taste dictates a truce to criticism on the day of the duke's wedding.

"The man has been tortured and wounded for months past by abusive letters, by public rebukes and by private rebukes.

"It is deplorable to think that the only utterances of the heads of the church on this day should be censorious of the clergyman who is invoking a blessing on the union.

"The chief effect of this melancholy episode will be to alienate public sympathy from the church at the very time when it is seeking to recall the nation to religion."

Windsors Thank All

Monts, France, June 3 (AP)—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor voiced their hope today for a "happy and useful private life" after the "trying time" of Edward's abdication preceding their marriage.

The duke in a statement addressed to "the public" thanked all who had wished him and his beloved Wallis happiness.

He said:

"The duchess and I wish to thank all those who have so kindly sent presents and good wishes on the occasion of our marriage.

"We shall never forget their friendly messages which mean so much to us today. After the trying time we have been through we now look forward to a happy and useful private life and to that measure of peace which we hope will be granted to us."

Windsor Duchess Born June, 1896 In Baltimore

The Duchess of Windsor was born in Baltimore, Md., on June 19, 1896, the daughter of Teackle Wallis Warfield, who died shortly after her birth, and Mrs. Alice Montague Warfield. Her family lineage dates back to William the Conqueror.

She was presented to society at the Bachelor Cotillion in Baltimore on December 7, 1914.

She met Lieutenant E. Winfield Spencer, Jr., naval aviator, in Pensacola, Fla., in 1916 and married him on November 8, 1916.

The couple lived on Atlantic Hill in Hull for a short time and then moved to San Diego. She returned to Maryland and rejoined her husband in Shanghai later. They separated and they returned to New York.

She had made her first trip to Europe in 1923. In 1925 she met Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Aldrich Simpson at a party in New York. On December 10, 1927, she was divorced from Lieutenant Spencer on grounds of desertion and went to England.

On July 21, 1928, she married Ernest Simpson, who had previously been divorced from his first wife. She divorced Simpson on October 27, 1936, at Ipswich Assizes on grounds of unfaithfulness.

Her name was first publicly linked with the then King Edward VIII on November, 11, 1936.

Today she married Edward, who had since abdicated.

Tax Rate Same

Despite a loss of over a million dollars in valuations, the tax rate for the town of Beverly will be $33.80 for 1937, according to William R. Brooks, chairman of the board of assessors, today. This is the same rate as 1936.

DUKE THANKS PRESS, WON'T HIDE NEWS

Monts, France, June 3 (AP)—In a statement to the press, the Duke of Windsor today thanked the newspapermen for their treatment of him and the duchess. He appealed for "the privacy they feel now is their due," and promised that he would not withdraw into secrecy.

He said:

"The Duke and Duchess of Windsor wish to take this opportunity of expressing to journalists their appreciation of the courtesy which has, for the most part, been shown to them under unprecedented circumstances.

"They would like it to be on the record that, although inaccurate statements and reports seem to have been unavoidable during these months which have been trying for all concerned, there has been an evident willingness to contradict them.

"In regards to the future, the duke realizes that any atmosphere of secrecy would be unsatisfactory and he will always be prepared to supply any news of importance concerning the duchess and himself.

"At the same time, the duke and duchess, while fully understanding the difficulties, want this day to appeal to the press of the world to give them that measure of consideration and privacy which they feel now is their due."

First Hubby Hides As Wally Weds

San Diego, Cal., June 3 (INS)—Commander Winfield Spencer, first husband of Mrs. Wallis Warfield, today was in seclusion, "somewhere in California."

Injured in a hunting accident almost six months ago, Commander Spencer was receiving treatment at the Naval Hospital here until two weeks ago when he obtained three months' sick leave, before reporting to a new post at the naval air station, Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.

Commander Spencer has been reticent in speaking of his first wife, since her romance with the Duke of Windsor. In his only interview he had nothing but the best to say for the vivacious woman he married in Baltimore in 1917, and who divorced him in Virginia in 1927.

"My duties were such," he said, "that I couldn't keep up with the social whirl in which Wallis found herself, and we just naturally drifted apart.

"I hope she has everything she desires. I wish nothing but the best of luck for her."

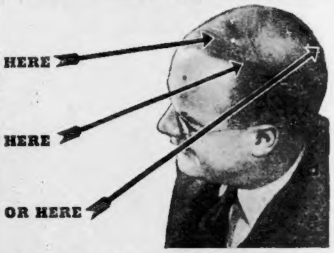
Judge Schofield's father, former mayor George Howard Fall of Malden, died in his sleep yesterday. He was 79.

Double funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Center Methodist Church, Malden.

Schofield entered the hospital Monday and his death was caused by spinal meningitis. He was stricken two weeks ago.

A native of Newton, Schofield was graduated from Newton high school and Dartmouth College. At high school he was a star player on the baseball and football teams.

Prior to the World war he served as an investigator for the U. S. Tariff Commission. At one time he was a wool broker but in recent years was a conveyancer and insurance broker.



RE-GROW HAIR

• • • Science has found that the hair-growing structure (papilla) remains alive and ready to respond to proper stimulative treatment even long after hair has disappeared from the scalp.

Thomas has perfected a method of stimulating this dormant hair-growing structure to normal activity. First, Thomas treatment removes the causes of inactivity (usually one or more of 14 local scalp disorders) and then skillfully supplies the necessary stimulation and thus makes it possible for the hair to gain sufficient strength to push through the follicle and become visible again on the scalp.

Come in person to the nearest Thomas office TODAY and learn more about this precise, reliable method of growing hair, stopping hair-fall, and ending dandruff. OHIO GOVERNOR TO HOLD STEEL PEACE PARLEY

By The Associated Press

[illegible]

"If there is not too much said, I feel that progress can be made."

[illegible]

Van A. Bittner, director of the S. W. O. C. in the Chicago area, charged the steel firms involved in the strike to carry their case to President Roosevelt. He said the union was willing to let the President decide the merits of its demand for recognition.

MASS FUNERAL HELD

Meanwhile a mass funeral was held today for five of the six men killed in the strike riot Memorial Day near the Republic plant in South Chicago.

Approximately 700 miners were to return to the Superior Coal Company's No. 4 mine at Wilsonville, Ill., today marking the end of a 2..-hour underground sit-down strike.

Trucks of the Little Falls Laundry Company at Little Falls, N. J., were stoned today soon after they left the protective cordon of State troopers, thrown around the laundry-plant on orders of Governor Harold G. Hoffman.

Woman Bank Aide Starts Jail Term

Miss Marion Marsters, 35, of Melville avenue, Dorchester, clerk and telephone operator in the Quincy Trust Company, Quincy, started a one-year sentence today in Dedham jail.

On Tuesday she was found guilty in Quincy court on a charge of larceny of more than $100 from the bank. Previously she had been found guilty in federal court, but had been placed on probation as a result of the impending district court hearing.

DeCELLES SAYS GUARANTY BORROWED

MUTUAL PROBE CONTINUES

Insurance Commissioner DeCelles would not have licensed the Commonwealth Mutual Liability Insurance Company had he known on Dec. 31, 1935, what he knew 10 months later, the commissioner declared today.

Testifying before the special legislative commission investigating affairs of the bankrupt company, DeCelles said that the license was granted before the guaranteed [illegible] was put up in entirety.

[illegible] he said he had the promise of Attorney George S. Ryan [illegible] for the Commonwealth.

Ryan did not tell him that directors of the company had borrowed money with which to purchase the $25,000 worth of government bonds put up as a guaranty of good faith [illegible] he asserted.

BORROWED MONEY

"I did not learn that the $25,000 had been borrowed until Miss Katherine O'Leary of my department made her report to me," he continued. "I did not have any talk with officers of the company after I learned about it."

Up to that point, DeCelles explained he had been under the impression that the Insurance Premium Finance Company (a Commonwealth affiliate) had made an outright gift of the bonds to the parent company.

Q—There was an obligation on the part of the Commonwealth to pay the finance company $25,200 for the $25,000 worth of bonds, wasn't there? A—I don't know whether there was. There was only a memorandum that the money had been loaned.

Q—Was there any misrepresentative made by counsel for the Commonwealth to your department in connection with the bonds before the license was granted? A—No representation was made.

Q—Is that a criminal ofense? A—I don't know, but I am referring the entire matter to the attorney general for whatever action he may wish to take.

QUERIED ABOUT COHEN

Questioning then turned towards the Eastern States Insurance Company and DeCeliese was asked if he knew Frank Cohen of New York, financial backer of the Commonwealth, was behind the Eastern States. He said he didn't.

He added that he had no suspicion that Cohen was connected with the Commonwealth either until the fall of 1936.

Prior to the resumption of the hearing DeCelles conferred with Bank Commissioner William P. Husband about allegations the insurance commissioner made yesterday of a "washout" check transaction.

Charlestown Girl Seized With Cafe Bandit Suspects

A pretty Charlestown blonde of 20 and two boys of the same age were taken to Cambridge police headquarters today by detectives investigating a series of armed robberies in Cambridge, Lowell, Andover and Brookline.

The girl's mother forcibly remonstrated with police when they appeared at the family home in Dupont street and insisted on accompanying her daughter when she was taken away for questioning.

Holding of the young woman and her boy friends was part of a general roundup, in the course of which three other youths of 20 were taken from a tavern in Green street in Cambridge, late last night.

The six were grilled most of the day. The girl has wavy ash blonde hair, and appeared wearing a brown sports suit and yellow sweater.

Detectives questioned them with particular reference to the robbery of the Gateway Resaurant in Fresh Pond parkway, Cambridge, Monday morning. Also, regarding the robbery of Brigham's ice cream parlor in North Cambridge, and the raid on the Howard Johnson ice cream stand in Andover recently.

NAZIS RUSHING NEW FLEET TO SPAIN

By WALTER DIETZEL
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Berlin, June 3—Germany rushed still more warships to Spanish waters today as Reich War Minister Werner von Blomberg and Premier Mussolini discussed questions of military co-operation in Rome.

The destroyers Tiger and Iltis were ordered to Spain, speeding in the wake of four submarines which departed for the same destination on Tuesday.

EUROPE JITTERY

The flow of naval reinforcements to the trouble zone continued while Europe still remained jittery as a result of the bombing of Almeria by German warships on Monday in reprisal for bombardment of the battleship Deutschland by Loyalist Spanish planes.

It was announced officially four 500-ton submarines had departed for Spanish waters Tuesday. Three other German submersibles are understood to be in Spanish waters already.

The latest batch of underwater craft sent to Spain were only recently completed and represent the most modern type of submarine that Germany possesses.

CRUISER TO SAIL

Each craft carries one 8.8 centimeter gun and five torpedo tubes.

It was announced officially the cruiser Koeln will sail shortly for Spain, after which "reinforcement of German naval forces in Spanish waters will be temporarily complete.

The Deutschland is remaining in Spanish waters, officials explained, because the commander and crew requested that the ship should not be ordered home as a result of the pounding it took from Loyalist aerial bombs.

Duce Stages Huge War Show for Nazi Leader

Rome, June 3 (AP)—Premier Mussolini staged a genuine air attack on a mock naval base today to show Adolf Hitler's representative just how effectively Italian aviation could perform in war-time.

Italian planes roared in formation to the attack near Furbaba as a display for Marshal Werner von Blomberg, visiting German war minister.

ROOSEVELT ASKS POWER, FLOOD PLAN

OUTLINES NEW PROJECTS

Washington, June 3 (INS)—Creation of seven regional authorities that would joint the nation into an integrated system for handling power development, flood control, drought arrestment and soil erosion was asked of Congress today by President Roosevelt in a special message.

It was the chief executive's final contribution to the current session for making possible "the more abundant life."

His message dealt with the broad general subject of "prudent husbandry of our national resources" through far-sighted management. The prospect of a series of publicly owned power plants however focused attention on the following statement by the President:

"And provision should be made for the effective administration of hydro-electric projects which have been or may be undertaken as a part of a multiple purpose watershed development. The water-power resources of the nation must be protected from private monopoly and used for the benefit of the people."

PROPOSED AREAS

The seven proposed control areas would be located as follows:

1—The Atlantic seaboard;

2—The Great Lakes-Ohio Valley territory;

3—The drainage basin of the Tennessee and Cumberland Rivers;

4—The drainage basins of the Missouri River and the Red River of the North.

5—The drainage basins of the Arkansas, Red and Rio Grande Rivers;

6—The basins of the Colorado River and the rivers flowing into the Pacific south of the California-Oregon line, and,

7—The Columbia River basin.

The President outlined his ideas [illegible]

[illegible]

"This proposal," wrote Mr. Roosevelt, "is in the interest of economy and the prevention of overlapping or one-sided developments.

"It leaves the Congress wholly free to determine what shall be undertaken and provides the Congress with a complete picture not only of the needs of each one of the regions but of the relationship of each of the regions to the whole of the nation."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

MAN, GIRL FAIL IN DEATH TRY

the gas didn't seem to be affecting me," Smith was quoted as having said, "I shut off the motor and tried to revive her. Then I made up my mind to face the music, and here I am."

A neighboring doctor was called to minister to the girl. When she was partially revived she was sent to the Boston Psychopathic Hospital, while police questioned Smith at Wakefield headquarters. His story police gave as follows:

"We didn't know what to do and we made up our minds this morning there was no use going on. Dorothy said she was willing to die with me and I was willing to die with her. I love her.

"We stopped the car somewhere on the road near Danvers. I hitched up the hose and started the motor. Then I locked the doors of the car and we sat in the back seat and waited.

"She passed out first. She looked so terribly I knew she was going to die. The monoxide wasn't affecting me, it seemed. I got scared. I thought she'd be dead and I'd still be living.

"I shut off the motor and opened the windows. I worked over her for an hour and a half and brought her to. Then I started for Wakefield. I love her and I still want to die."

Smith did not disclose where he had been since May 21, the day on which both he and the girl were reported missing, police said.

How police came to be waiting at Smith's home was something not officially explained, but one police version was that after the attempt at double suicide Smith telephoned to his wife.

"I'm on the way home," he is quoted as telling his wife. "I'm bringing Dot home to her family. We tried to kill ourselves, but it didn't work.

"I'm coming to say goodby to you after I bring her home and then I'm going away and kill myself. I hope she will join me later."

The girl, a senior at the Wakefield High School, lived with her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Chase, a few houses from the Smith home in Bellevue avenue.

Smith has three grown children, one of whom is a married son, according to authorities.

Following a prolonged questioning, Smith was taken to Malden court where he was held on a technical charge of non-support, lodged by his wife.

Judge Elbridge G. Davis decided to commit Smith to Danvers State Hospital for a 35-day observation period while police continued investigation of the case.

The boy, who was treasurer of the junior class at Cambridge High and Latin School, was killed yesterday by a truck while on his way home from school.

Interment will be in the family lot in Cambridge cemetery.

STRIKE PERILS MEAT SUPPLY

Providence, June 3—Rhode Island housewives faced a critical shortage in the supply of fresh meat in butcher shops today as more than 300 employes of 18 packing houses went out on strike.

When the meatpackers, a CIO affiliate, walked out today, an automatic strike was called by the Teamsters, Chauffeurs and Freight Handlers Union, associated with the A. F. of L., because of a clause in their charter preventing handling of freight at a point where a strike is in progress.

BOY, GIRL AX SLAYERS GIVEN 30 YEARS EACH

Jersey City, N. J., June 3 (AP)—Gladys MacKnight, 1[illegible], and her former choir boy sweetheart, Donald Wightman, 19, were sentenced today to from 2[illegible] to 3[illegible] years each at hard labor in state prison for the murder of the girl's mother, Mrs. Helen MacKnight.

The sentences were imposed by Judge Thomas F. Meaney, who presided at the ten-day trial, which ended a week ago tonight in the conviction of the young couple of second degree murder.

The maximum penalty the judge could impose was thirty years.

The State had asked the death penalty for the pair, each of whom accused the other from the witness stand of striking the hatchet blows which killed Mrs. MacKnight in the kitchen of her Bayonne home on the night of July 31 last.

The girl and the slaying resulted from her mother's discovery of Donald "petting" Gladys. Wightman asserted it followed an argument between the girl and her mother over who should prepare dinner and both denied they struck the fatal blows.

Calm and with heads bowed, Donald and Gladys stood before Judge Meaney for sentence.

The youthful pair averted their eyes from each other as they were in the courtroom, although they sat only a few chairs apart.

ELDER HELD IN $10,000 BAIL FOR GRAND JURY

DEAN KISSED GIRL, COURT IS TOLD BY NORTON

[illegible]

QUESTIONED ON PAPERS

A [illegible] search packet of private papers of the slain Dr. Speer was also touched upon by the defense attorney Charles Fairhurst. The lawyer intimated the papers have been missing since the murder.

[illegible] sought to get Norton to admit he feared dismissal shortly before the headmaster's death but Norton denied this.

On his close association with Norton for 22 years at the school in Northfield founded by Dwight Moody the famous evangelist, Norton based his claim of ready recognition of Elder on the night of May 25.

Resuming his questions, Attorney Fairhurst demanded to know if their relations were not strained.

"Well, I'd say our relations were somewhat strained," replied Norton. "It was on account of things that happened in school that we disagreed quite emphatically on."

TELLS OF PEEPHOLE

Q—Did it get so serious that there was a session between you and Mr. and Mrs. Cutler and Mr. and Mrs. Elder? A—Yes, I'll admit that.

Q—Well, that came as a result of a complaint you made, didn't it? A—Yes, that's true.

Q—Well, now, Mr. Norton, something came to your attention through your observation through a peephole didn't it?

[illegible] made no answer at this [illegible].

Q—Through a peephole into Dean Elder's office? A—Into Miss Dill's office.

Q—You made that peephole deliberately, didn't you? A—Yes.

Q—You wanted to see through it? A—Yes.

Q—Did you make that hole in the dead of night?

There was no reply.

Q—And you peeked through that hole lots of times? A—No, not lots of times.

Q—How many times? A—I think three times.

REVEALS PRAYER

Q—Was it so low you had to get down on your knees to peek? A—No, it was about the heighth of the table.

Q—You had to bend over to look through it? A—Yes.

Q—And you said you saw something and went to Dr. Cutler about it? A—Yes.

Q—And as a result, there was a meeting? A—Yes.

Q—You told Dr. and Mrs. Cutler and Dean and Mrs. Elder? A—Yes.

Q—The following day, or at some later time, did you apologize to Tom Elder? A—No, sir, I did not apologize.

Q—Didn't you get down on your knees to pray and ask God to forgive you? A—I got down on my knees and prayed.

Q—Didn't you get down on your knees and ask God to forgive you for saying the things you did about Tom Elder to Dr. Cutler? A—No, I didn't get down on my knees to ask forgiveness.

Q—Didn't you ask forgiveness on your bended knees—you can't answer yes or no. A—Give me an opportunity and I'll tell my story.

Q—I don't want you to pray here. Didn't you do that, didn't you ask God for forgiveness for what you said about "Miss Dill" and Dean Elder?

Norton made no answer.

Q—Did Tom Elder pray? A—Well, we all got down on our knees, the three of us, Dr. Cutler, Elder and I.

Q—Did you go to "Miss Dill's" office? A—Yes.

Q—And talk with her? A—Yes. I told her I was sorry.

Q—Did Dr. Cutler ask you to do that? A—No.

Q—You felt obliged to do it didn't you? You had reported that while Tom Elder was at his desk you saw him lean over and kiss her? A—No, I said I saw him kiss her at her desk.

Q—Then you wanted to apologize to her for what you said? A—I did not.

Q—Did Miss Dill get down on her knees and pray? A—No.

Q—Could you peek into Dr. Elliot Speer's office, too? A—No, sir.

Q—Did you ever look through Dr. Elliot Speer's keyhole? A—No, sir.

QUIZZED ON SPEER PAPERS

Q—Well, you were just interested in what Miss Dill was doing; is that right?

The witness did not respond.

Q—Did you have any trouble with Dean Elder about looking over his mail? A—No, sir, never.

Q—Were you ever charged with looking into personal mail? A—I never was accused of that; no one ever caught me doing that.

Q—You never had any talk with Dr. Cutler about that? A—I was never accused of looking over mail.

Q—Did you know Elliot Speer well? A—Yes, I knew him.

Q—Before he died in 1934, did you ever see any private papers of his that were sealed? A—I don't recall ever seeing any.

Q.—Did he leave any private papers in the vault? A—I know he frequently left a large envelope in the safe.

Q.—Do you know whether the envelope was there when Elliot Speer died? A.—I don't know.

THRONG IN COURT

Q.—When did you see it last? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—You never handled that envelope? A.—No.

Q—And where it has gone, you don't know? A—No, sir.

Q—Two or three days before Dr. Speer died, were you talking with him? A—I can't say.

Q—Did you have any talk with Dr. Speer as to how long you were going to stay there? A—No, sir.

Q—Was there any remark made to you that you would be out of there before Christmas? A—No, never.

Interest in the three-year-old unsolved murder of Dr. Speer attracted a crowd of more than 300 to the courthouse and there was a wild scramble for seats before Judge Philip H. Ball opened court.

SAW MAN NEAR GARAGE

"With Mrs. Norton in the car beside me, I drove into the driveway of my home about 11 o'clock that night and got out and went into the back hall to unlock the kitchen door and turn on the lights," testified Norton.

These lights, in the kitchen and garage, illuminated the scene so he could recognize Elder, he later declared.

"Mrs. Norton went in the house," continued Norton, "and got back into the car and drove it into the garage.

"I got out on the driver's side.

"As I stepped out I turned toward the open garage doors and as I went toward them I saw a man—the accused man—standing a bit outside, I'd say on the apron of the driveway, just in front of the garage.

SAW SHOTGUN

"His first words to me were: 'Mr. Norton, I want to talk with you.'

"I advanced toward him and recognized him as Tom Elder.

"I thought he wanted to have a talk with me there, but he quickly said: 'Get back into that corner.'

"I didn't make any move at that moment. Then he said: 'Norton, you've got to get back there.'

"Then I saw him take a shotgun from under his coat, and he pointed it right at me.

"Sensing my danger, I guess I tried to figure how I could get away from him.

"I was standing there at the rear end of the car. I realized I had to do something very quick.

DASHED TO HOUSE

"I made a dash for the door—that's the garage door—and grabbed it and brought it between him and me.

"I saw the gun muzzle pointing at me, not more than three feet away. I don't know why it didn't explode.

"Then I ran the runway connecting the garage with the kitchen and through the kitchen door and locked it. I shouted to Mrs. Norton that Tom Elder was outside with a gun."

Questioned by Assistant District Attorney Henry Herr, who had let him relate his story uninterrupted, Norton then stated that his wife was in the house during the entire incident.

"Where was the light you turned on in the garage?" asked Herr.

ACQUAINTED 25 YEARS

"In the ceiling, directly over the car," replied Norton.

"And you say the kitchen lights were on, too?"

"They were."

"And were the garage doors wide open?"

"Yes, except when I pulled the door between him and me."

"Were the headlights of your car on, too?"

"No, I had turned them off."

"So you saw this man, anyway, so you could identify him?"

"I did," testified Norton.

"And who is he?"

"Thomas E. Elder."

"Did you ever know him before this time?"

"Yes, for 25 years."

"How did you know him?"

"For 22 years we were associated together at Mt. Hermon School for Boys."

WORE BROWN COAT

"You are positive that this was the man?" asked the assistant district attorney.

"Yes, sir, I am positive," said Norton. "I had worked with him during all those years."

"Had you seen him recently?"

"No, not for two years, before this time."

"But at the school you saw him frequently?"

"That's correct."

"Can you describe his dress on this occasion?"

"He wore a long coat nearly to his ankles. It was from under that coat he brought out the gun. I'd say it was a light brown coat."

Asked about his alleged assailant's tone and demeanor, the witness said:

"As I got out of the car and he said, 'I want to talk to you,' his voice was medium loud and it came clear. When he said to get back into the corner, it was a little louder and clearer. When he said that I didn't like the idea, I didn't see any reason why I should, but then he shouted, 'You've got to do it.'

"SCARED TO DEATH"

Cross-examined on his story of the night of May 25, Norton insisted he recognized Elder right away. He could not recall where his assailant's hands were before the gun was produced. He could not say whether his assailant wore glasses, but declared he did not notice any.

Asked if he was frightened, he said:

"I was scared to death."

Norton said that after running into his house he told Mrs. Norton to call the police, and after the police had been there and gone he himself telephoned to the publicity agent for Mt. Hermon School.

The strained relations between him and Elder he said began in 1922, ten years after he went to work at the school.

WOMAN TELLS OF AUTO

Mrs. Edith G. Weymouth, who lives two doors from the Nortons, testified she was sewing on the evening of May 25 and saw an automobile pass two or three times.

She went to bed about 11 o'clock and said she heard a voice as if in sharp command. Then she said she heard an auto shifted into what she believed was second gear and speed away at 50 miles an hour.

The car, she testified, had number plates with a white background and green numerals but she did not get the number.

In cross-examination Mrs. Weymouth said she had known Norton by sight for some years and that he had worked in the same bank as she did, the Franklin County Trust Co., during April.

MAID TESTIFIES

Miss Yvonne Arsenault, maid at the house next door to the Norton residence, testified she slept on a sunporch and after going to bed saw a man with a gun in the yard of the Norton home.

"I heard a voice call, 'Hey,' and I saw a man with a gun," she said. "The barrel was about a foot long. I saw him get into an auto and go away."

She was not asked to try to identify Elder.

The other government witnesses were three policemen. Sergeant Harold Delaney, state police, produced pictures of the scene and two local officers, J. Richard Laurie and Earl Welcome, told of being called to the Norton house and finding the two occupants frightened.

Laurie said it was a bright moonlight night. Although in their search they noticed their own footprints on the dewy grass, they did not find any footprints of another man, he said.

HELD IN SAME BAIL

The defense did not call witnesses. District Attorney David H. Keedy, in closing, argued that the story of Norton, as a substantial citizen, was sufficient in itself to cause Elder to be held. Attorney Fairhurst said:

"I dont' believe you can take the testimony of a man who would bore a peephole through a wall and then report what he did on a man who was supposed to be his friend."

"I hold the defendant for the grand jury, same bail," said Judge Ball without further comment.

Judge Reconciles Couple, in Court For Separation

With the advice that they "go home and behave," Judge Frederick J. Dillon of Suffolk probate court today reconciled a young Roxbury couple.

Mrs. Mary C. Puleo, 26, of East Cottage street, Roxbury, had brought a separate support petition against her husband, Leo T. Puleo, 30, who was contesting the action.

The woman testified that on March 16 her husband "flew into a rage" and objected to her going to a show. She said she went, however.

"When I came home," she continued, "I found him cutting my clothes. He started to cut my fur coat and I tried to grab it from him. I lived in fear of my life."

Then Judge Dillon suddenly asked her:

"Are you willing to go back to your husband?"

"I don't know," came the reply, and then Mrs. Puleo added:

"If he asks me I will."

Then ordering Puleo be put on the stand later he asked [illegible]:

"Are you willing to take your wife back?"

"Yes," came the answer without hesitation.

"Then go home and behave yourselves," admonished Judge Dillon.

SEES HOUR BILL AID TO BUDGET

Washington, June 3 (INS) A balanced budget, adjusted taxes and industrial stability would result from enactmenet of the proposed national wages and hours bill, Robert Johnson, Jersey manufacturer, told the joint Senate-House Labor Committee today.

Asserting "we cannot conduct our business unless we have a balanced budget and some adjustment of the burdensome tax structure," Johnson, long time advocate of short hours, pictured business as the ultimate beneficiary in a lightening of the government's relief costs as industry absorbed jobless when hours were reduced.

He said:

"I have heard but one good reason for paying low wages and working long hours and that is because some competitor down the street is doing so.

"Many of us are confident that the plan of employing all our people in private business is a far less expensive way to meet our problem of unemployment than to continue the present system."

Drive on Clay Pit Death Trap Opens, 2 Bodies Found

Demand that Chelsea take steps to fill in or fence off the old clay pit in Webster avenue where two more boys lost their lives yesterday, was made today by State Senator Bernard L. Sullivan and Alderman Frederick Ryan.

After searching six hours with underwater lights police and firemen early today recovered the bodies of Sidney Harris of Fourth street and Jackie Goodman of Third street, 10-year-old chums and classmates at the Williams grammar school, Chelsea.

Declaring he and Alderman Ryan have been fighting for years to safeguard the claypit, Senator Sullivan said the city should act now despite the fact that the claypit is private property. Many lives have been lost in the murky waters, he pointed out.

GEORGE HOLLAND

SINCE THIS AND EVERY OTHER METROPOLITAN NEWSPAPER will devote today, their wedding-day, to getting out Duke of Windsor-Mrs. Wallis Warfield editions, this column of impolite piffle might just as well fall in line with an angle on the paramount news of the day . . . Mulling through our ratsnestofa-desk, this B.A.D. stooge dug up a clipping, datelined Paris, August 14, 1935, telling how the American beauty charmed the then Prince of Wales . . . It specifically mentions a privately circulated pamphlet, "What Charmed the Prince," and declares her success is based on "charm precepts" any girl can learn . . . Mind if we repeat a few, girls?

Watch other women and profit from their mistakes.

If you haven't a Baltimore or Boston voice, get one. You can skip this one.)

After that, put your brain into high and run along silently.

Get a mirror, a dozen mirrors! Study yourself in every aspect, but remember that being attractive means being healthy.

Get a doctor. Taking up sports doesn't matter until a physician has made you understand how to eat and so on, and that women's health doesn't depend on much exercise, but on languidly taking it easy, saving up strength for the "concentration moments" when a man is around.

This is a man's world, so make them provide what you need to make them happy.

All men love a lovely listener—and compliments; but sweet voices must not be too sweet. A soupcon of vinegar adds spice.

Hats, the way your hair is done, gloves, rings and bracelets, stockings and shoes—it is these that make you what the French call "chic," make a man seek you, at least to shake hands.

(Who said we weren't a Helping Hand to a Lonely-Heart?)

In Re-Gourmandizing Motorists:

With auto accidents and deaths or injuries due to them running ahead of last year's figures—which wound up with a national score of 36,800 people killed and almost a million injured—it might be a good idea to give heed to the conclusions of Dr. Eric Ogden, associate professor in physiology in the University of California, reached after an extensive study of motor mishap causes . . . Both hunger and overeating and the hynotic influence of long, humdrum driving and road watching, he finds, cause automobile accidents as surely as over-indulgence in liquor and physical disability . . . Good driving requires an even flow of blood through the brain, the professor points out, and this situation is affected both by a lack of food and by overeating . . . He suggests frequent and very light meals for the man on the road . . . Also extended drivers' tests, covering at least a full day, to bring out the hidden physical and mental faults that affect driving or to determine that such faults are absent.

Thisa and Thata:

Joe McGrath, chairman of the Democratic state committee, is a possible candidate for mayor . . . Nomination papers for mayoralty candidates will be issued by the Boston election commissioner on August 31 . . . Each candidate will be required by law to obtain the signatures of 3000 registered voters . . . Francis X. Sheehan, of the United States Internal Revenue Department, will be elected president of the President Franklin D. Roosevelt Club of Dorchester . . . The capture of a bandit in a Newton home by five of his men so pleased Chief Michael T. Hughes of the Newton police department that he ordered they be given two extra days off . . . The officers are Sergeant Cleary and Patrolmen Dalton, Hennrikus, Slavin and [illegible] McEnaney . . . The 1938 Middlesex D. A. fight got under way with District Attorney Warren L. Bishop's recent intimation that he will seek a third term and announcements from two former assistants, Eddie Bushell of Malden and Frank G. Volpe (whom Bishop fired) that they will run for the same office . . . Mayor Eddie Kenney of Woburn is expected to be the Democratic nominee.

Once Over Lightly:

St. Paul's Cathedral has an offering called the Dean's discretion fund, or is this oldhat to you parishioners? . . . On the West Coast, where movie actresses stay this side of 30 for years [illegible] years, interviewers were blunt to the point of honesty regarding the Lunts' respective years on earth, revealing to those [illegible] know that Lynn Fontanne's birth year is 1887 as compared [illegible] 1893 . . . but they would worry their [illegible] [illegible] the Los Angeles [illegible] [illegible] a [illegible] week . . . [illegible] to be published [illegible] "No [illegible] Passage" [illegible] has already gone into a hefty second edition . . . Ruth Weston [illegible] will spend the summer in Europe . . . 'Sea Legs,' which brought Dorothy Stone and [illegible] here some weeks ago, stopped breathing at the [illegible] in New York last Saturday having played two weeks [illegible] one night with no money in the sock . . .

Comedy Hit For Boston

Twenty-Three and One-Half Hours Leave, new talking version of one of the screen's biggest comedy hits of the silent films with James Ellison and Terry Walker in the leading roles, and Boris Korloff's latest Universal starring picture, "Night Key," come to the RKO Boston screen tomorrow.

The featured picture, "23½ Hours Leave," tells the story of a cocky, young sergeant in a U. S. Army camp in 1917, who bets his buddies that he will eat breakfast with the general, whom he has never seen and moreover that he will have pancakes with him. How he succeeds in winning his ridiculous wager, after a series of amazing adventures and mishaps, makes one of the funniest films of the season.

"Night Key," which presents Karloff in a new kind of role, centers around one of the great burglar alarm systems such as guard thousands of banks and business firms throughout the nation. Karloff is cast as an inventor who has been robbed of the system which he invented. When he invents an improved system and is robbed of it too, he declares vengeance on his enemy.

CHAPTER 24

[illegible] was finished. She scrubbed the sink again for luck. The kitchen floor was next. She might as well scrub [illegible] and the good-natured Mexican woman who came twice a week to [illegible] always used a mop, but Mrs. Wilson scorned mops. [illegible]

[illegible] you're doing the floor" [illegible]

[illegible] and paused. "Do you want me to help you put the living room and dining room things back?" she asked [illegible]

[illegible]

"I'm not through upstairs yet."

"Could I do it alone?"

"I can't imagine it!"

[illegible]

"STEPPING OUT"

[illegible] two steps at a time. "You don't happen to know if my dress shirt is clean, do you?" he asked.

[illegible]

She wanted to say "Are we going somewhere?"

It had been weeks since they had dressed up and gone out [illegible]

[illegible] Edward said. "I'm sorry I can't take you, honey. This is a stupid dinner, but I won't call it time wasted if I get a job out of it. Friends of Helene's—lousy with money."

"Do they know you're married?" she asked in a low voice.

He looked [illegible] beautiful [illegible] dinner clothes. No one could tie a tie just the way he could. No one could wear [illegible] better. [illegible] looked what it was [illegible] Edward [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] "They don't care whether I'm married or not. If they give me a chance it won't be because I'm married, or not married. For heavens sake, don't make it any harder than you can help. It's tough enough now!"

There was nothing to say.

"Dinner's ready," Mrs. Wilson [illegible]

[illegible]

"Take the car, why don't you?" Mrs. Wilson [illegible] "I won't be needing it."

"No, thanks. I'm being met. And you needn't tell me you won't need the car. I know Ed is gone and there's no one to drive you."

"Marie drives!" he said explosively.

Bee turned to her savagely. "Don't! Don't start it. Don't start anything in this house you don't want to be stuck with the rest of your life!"

Mrs. Wilson put down her dish-cloth, followed Bee into the hall. "That's enough," she said coldly. "If you're going, go along. No one is asking Marie to do anything."

"Just the same," Bee called, "take my advice. Once you start you're sunk."

Later, as they finished the dishes, Mrs. Wilson said: "Bee isn't herself lately. I'm going to take her to see Dr. Shepherd. I think she needs a tonic."

"She does look tired," Marie said.

She too was tired, but nobody seemed interested.

Encouraged, Mrs. Wilson chatted on.

"Bee wasn't herself last night. I don't want you to think anything of it. Bee's a good girl. Papa wasn't himself either, or he wouldn't have shouted down at her like that when she and Ritchie were parked in the car. Papa has been worried too.

BEE'S ULTIMATUM

"Men worry so much about their positions, I think, and still they always have positions. The other men, I mean. I told him Bee had a right to park outside and talk to Ritchie if she wants to, but it does seem foolish.

Why did they come here first, when she knew she had to drive him back to town?"

[illegible]

Mrs. Wilson [illegible] "Of course, you won't repeat anything you overheard last night. They were all overwrought. It was just nothing. Just nothing at all."

[illegible] Edward [illegible] He paid her board [illegible] dollars.

"Could you let me have five and a half more, for the ice box?" her mother asked.

[illegible] Why ask Edward? [illegible] stamped [illegible]

"Maybe I'll let you have some more next week."

With all their eyes upon him, he said

"Oh, I just got a few dollars, helping Ches Elliott out in the haberdashery shop. Just part-time stuff."

"No chance of it being permanent, Ed?" Bee asked.

Edward shook his head. "Isn't likely."

"Well then you'd better find something else, Ed Wilson, because I've paid my last 40. That's a month in advance, and practically a present. I'm leaving Monday. I'm really through at the office now, but I'm staying through Saturday to help the new girl.

"No, I'm not crazy. I told Pop and everyone else who happened to be listening that I was leaving. Didn't you hear me?"

[illegible]

"Beatrice, you mustn't SAY such a thing! You won't ever leave us until you marry. I won't let you, and you wouldn't go, you know you wouldn't."

[illegible] "I'm sorry, Mom. Pop made it impossible for me to stay here any longer."

[illegible] "I made it impossible! Because I insisted upon decency in my own house! [illegible] if that's impossible for you—"

"Claude [illegible]

[illegible] Everything's arranged. I've given up my job and I've got my last pay check. I'm driving to New York with Zelda Buckby, starting at 6 o'clock Tuesday morning. The only thing left to decide is whether to take Zelda's car, or to take ours—"

[illegible] my car. To New York! [illegible]

"CLAUDE!"

"[illegible] by a darn sight she won't take my car to New York and leave us for six weeks or two months [illegible]

"Pop! Please [illegible] It's our car [illegible] We bought it together, you admit that, don't you?"

From behind the newspaper he said: "You bought out [illegible]

"I paid half."

"All right, all right, you paid half."

She [illegible] She really looked very tired. Terribly tired. She [illegible]

"Now [illegible] we'll [illegible] sell [illegible] Ed, what's a fair price? Or if you want a more [illegible] arrangement, we can have it appraised."

[illegible] Mr. Wilson said [illegible] I've given it, is worth $50 today. I expect to [illegible] when I turn it in next fall.

"[illegible] Pop!" Edward said.

"About $150."

Mr. Wilson raised his voice again. "That car [illegible]

"Listen," Bee cried. "I'll give you $150 for your half interest. Or you give me $150 for mine. Which?"

Mr. Wilson [illegible] "I couldn't [illegible] right now."

Percale Perks Up

IT'S EASY enough for old fashioned percale to make a clean sweep of kitchen fashions now that it's made up in adorable young house frocks!

Losing none of its quaint [illegible]—colors are soft as [illegible]. Chinese embroideries, becoming beyond words, and the pattern is tiny and prim—it's modern as tomorrow morning. But do look at the round white organdy collar with ruffles, the extended shoulders, and the white binding along the flared skirt.

Miss Sally Scudder models this frock, another of the bride's come-into-the-kitchen fashions that paraded before the Congress.

Just the sort of thing that doesn't make being caught in the kitchen a calamity, not even if a disapproving dowager drives up in a long, shining car to see if the new in-law (meaning little you) is making or wrecking a home.

Comes in aqua, blue or red with white; around one dollar and a half! For shopping information, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, Liberty 4000, week-days until five, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE -:- By Beatrice Fairfax

Character and Ambition Hurt by Prolonged Unemployment

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

[illegible] going hungry are the frightful things [illegible] unemployed, or having a wretched job which [illegible] nothing, do to one's spirit.

[illegible] and fiancees write me in every mail of the [illegible] of character in their men which re[illegible] state of things.

Husbands borrow from wives and play the races in the hope of making a little, and, of course, get deeper and deeper into the hole.

Promising young men whom girls have expected to marry resort to all sorts of shabby subterfuges, in tragic attempts to cover their humiliation at being jobless or next to jobless. The following letter is one of many.

"DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

"For seven years we've gone together. He used to have a good job and we saved money for a home and all went well. But during the depression he lost his position.

At first he tried to recapture a job [illegible] but there was [illegible] working on a commission basis.

For the past three years he has done nothing. I have an excellent salary, a good position, and send a certain amount home to my mother every week. I have a little apartment and love it, as I am domestic, enjoy cooking and would be happy if I had a real home and children. I'm 27 years of age.

HE WON'T TRY

I feel that if my fiance really loved me, he would do anything to get work, even if it were only $10 a week, and we could go back and start again the little nest egg that meant so much to us both.

"I can't talk to him about the effect it's having on him, to things, not fighting for employment and being content to live with his people who have offered us a home [illegible] thing had gone out of him, something resp[illegible] on which a girl could build her hope for the future.

"As it is, he is satisfied to come to see me once or twice a week, listen to the radio, or go to the local movies. He has meals at my apartment which I prepare and seems to be content to let things drift. But I wish to goodness he'd get out and do something, even if it were only to drive a truck.'

"When I talk these things over with him he says I am nagging, gets peevish, and says he does the best he can. But I don't think any unemployed man who lives at home with his folks and doesn't really try to get a job is doing his best, do you?

"He is really a delightful companion, very popular with all his friends and as honest as can me, and I don't want to break with him or run around with other men. Our relationship has been so fine. We've not had what the world calls an 'affair.' If we ever break, it will be with feelings of mutual respect.

WILL SHE DROP HIM?

"I have plenty of faults, am quick-tempered and have a sharp tongue. I really love him and would hate to part with him. But it almost drives me crazy to see a fine, upstanding fellow living at home, making no real effort to get employment—and playing the races.

"My friends tell me to drop him, but I'd like to hear what you have to say. "ELIZABETH."

DEAR FRIEND:

You're not alone in having this very serious problem to face regarding your fiance's slow disintegration of character, brought about by the depression.

But at 27 years of age you should make up your mind whether it is wise to continue to drift with this fiance of yours, or call a halt to his lack of responsibility as [illegible] your future. BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Body Rejuvenation

POSED BY LYNNE BERKELEY

By ARLINE GOULD

THIS is the time of year when you should begin to take a passionate interest in the business of being beautiful.

While [illegible] may not be a [illegible] of loveliness, it's pretty safe to [illegible] a great deal of attention during the winter and spring months. But how about your body?

After all, it should rate as much coddling as your [illegible] and besides can you think of anything under the sun that can so instantly plunge one into a black despairing mood as a body that has gone out of control.

If you are serious about your looks and your weight (and this means building up as well as reducing), hie yourself in all haste to an ultra-modern Boston salon and see what [illegible] in wait for you.

To experience the thrills of electro-tonic treatments and mud baths amid the splendor of European spas is one thing but to enjoy them practically at home (and at very small cost) is certainly something else, too.

To be beautiful (almost beyond recognition) is the aim of skilled specialists at this salon extraordinary.

You will feel relaxed as you never dreamed was possible, your circulation will be sent surging with new purpose through your body, your skin will be like velvet to the touch [illegible] will be made to look and feel like a new woman.

You relax upon a magic table which [illegible] infra-red rays give [illegible] in a [illegible] warmth. The rays are [illegible] not from the table [illegible] an arched [illegible] respect it is like no reducing table you've ever seen, and hence is invigorating rather than enervating.

If you would like to know the name of this ultra-modern salon where you can be made beautiful while getting slim, call Arline Gould, Liberty 4300, week days until 5, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Choice Rules for Frying Chicken

Slow Cooking Keeps Meat Moist and Tender

By MARTHA LEE

SUMMER and fried chicken are in the air.

Those who are especially fond of fried chicken have a treat in store for them because there is an abundance of young chickens that make the ideal fried chicken the very essence of stellar summer meals.

The short cooking time of this tender soft meated size and all round complete satisfying qualities of chicken suggest only the addition of one or two cooked vegetables, a favorite salad, and perhaps cheese, fresh fruit and crackers for dessert. An easy meal indeed.

The small sized birds should be split lengthwise and the larger bird lengthwise and then crosswise or disjointed as for a fricassee. The butcher will usually perform this service and can do the job nicely and quickly with his sharp knives.

Chicken [illegible] be fried as [illegible]

One [illegible] teaspoon salt for the small sized bird [illegible] added to coating mixture is a good average taste. About one-third cup of flour is needed for each bird though a [illegible] should be planned if the coarse materials are used.

How to get the crust brown [illegible] and keep it moist and tender [illegible] the homemaker is seeking. A common reason for her failure is the fact that she has the mistaken idea that [illegible] is a quick process at a high temperature. This high te[illegible] the [illegible] Slow cooking at low to moderate temperature develops the chicken flavor and keeps the meat moist and tender. [illegible] cooking under these conditions too long a time will [illegible] results too.

* * *

It is difficult to write out a recipe for fried chicken since tastes vary so. The following may serve as a guide to homemakers who are preparing chicken for the first time or for those who wish to experiment to vary their present methods.

—Coating: Breadcrumbs, cornmeal and flour, cracker crumbs, or more. Flour browns more quickly than other materials. About 1-3 cup flour with ½ teaspoon salt will be needed for a bird weighing 1½ pounds, up to ½ cup will be required of the coarse materials. In using cornmeal less than one-half as much cornmeal or flour should be used [illegible] crust is objectionable [illegible]

[illegible]

3 [illegible] Fat is high at beginning [illegible] enough to brown then followed by low to moderate heat until done.

4 Time for cooking 25 to 30 minutes should be planned for 1½ pound bird.

Water may be added to the pan after the meat is browned.

Better results come too if the pieces are not crowded in the pan. If a thick coating is preferred there is less chance for the crust to come off.

Most homemakers when they start preparing chicken think invariably of fried chicken if it's summer. And then in the same thought think of the work attached to the job of watching and guarding it during the cooking.

A favorite way of cooking these spring, soft meated chickens varying in weight from 1½ to 3½ or four pounds is to bake them. For this the chicken is dismembered in the customary way. Roll the pieces in seasoned flour (¼ teaspoon salt to 1-3 cup flour for the smallest size, and a dash of pepper if your taste calls for it).

* * *

Place the pieces in a shallow pan, skillet or casserole and pour enough hot cream or top milk to reach about 2-3ds the depth of the pan. Place in a hot oven and brown the top. Turn pieces and brown the other side. Reduce the heat to low to moderate and cook slowly—covered or uncovered—until tender.

The small size will require about one-half hour the larger sizes up to one hour. If cooked uncovered, more cream or milk will need to be added during the cooking.

Chicken prepared this way develops an unusual flavor and is delicately tender and sweet. And the gravy is made while the meat is cooking. No last minute work in preparing this essential accompaniment to chicken and chicken dinners.

Get the EXTRA Jacket and you get truly FRESH Cigarettes

Most Cigarettes give you this single jacket ... it opens at the Top

...but Old Gold gives you this EXTRA jacket ... it opens at the BOTTOM

A PACK of Double-Mellow OLD GOLDS is worth a minute's study. This pack comes wrapped with an EXTRA jacket of Cellophane. It's wrapped double . . . two jackets instead of one. But that's not all.

Notice how scientifically the two Cellophane jackets are combined . . . so that one jacket seals the top of the pack and the other seals the bottom. No open seams anywhere . . . A weather-tight, climate-proof package.

It's a miracle-worker, this package! It brings you FRESH cigarettes wherever you buy them. Whether the climate is high and dry. Whether the climate is damp and muggy.

You never find a pack of Double-Mellow OLD GOLDS all dried out by heat or bloated to the point of sogginess by excessive moisture.

Stale cigarettes are tongue-burners and throat-stingers. But FRESH cigarettes—those fresh, Double-Mellow OLD GOLDS—are a delight from morning to night.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

[illegible] sketch en[illegible] Harvard square [illegible] to [illegible] with one of the funniest full page cartoons of modern [illegible] concluded that the American city has [illegible] entirely re[illegible] the interests [illegible] traffic. [illegible] street [illegible] in this [illegible] and [illegible] of the automobile is not to become a [illegible] cancer in the body politic.

Mr. McClintock has noble and elaborate ideas. He calculates that the necessary changes will cost about 57 billion dollars and [illegible] about 43 years.

[illegible] in mind reminds me [illegible] H. G. Wells' [illegible] of a city in [illegible] "When the Sleeper Wakes," [illegible] of the future.

Wells' Weird Ideas Grow Into Facts

Wells once remarked that he had been told that his sketch of the city of the future made up entirely out of his head resembled nothing so much as Chicago. And that was before those [illegible] elevated speedways so noticeable in modern [illegible] of Chicago came into being.

Wells' city was full of these vertical, horizontal and other [illegible] as well as moving platforms lying side by side and graduated from slow to medium to fast to express. The pedestrian could step from one platform to the other till he reached express speed. The rest of the city seemed to be planned for cross country traffic, the general effect resembling a combination of roller coasters at Revere Beach, toboggan slides and ski jumps—the whole city under a monstrous glass roof aerated by wind-vanes.

Mr. McClintock's design which he offered at the recent national city planning conference is naturally less picturesque. It is intended to be more practical, being planned not by a traffic expert but a theatrical designer. It is the work of Norman Bel Geddes who turned the Boston Opera House into a mediaeval cathedral once on a time, who has designed a monstrous stage production for Dante's "Inferno," never yet produced, who staged "The Eternal Road" in New York this past season, and who therefore, obviously, is an expert in city planning for traffic engineering.

Cites 36,000 Dead As Annual Toll

"The nation must discard its useless streets and highway systems, designing and rebuilding roadways so that the traffic may move swiftly, unimpeded and safely. We cannot look with equanimity upon a transportation mechanism which takes an annual toll of 36,000 lives and injures more than a million. Nor can we look with tolerance upon shackles which fetter this newest servant of mankind."

The picture that Mr. Norman Bel Geddes and Mr. McClintock have in mind is obviously the result of brooding on cities like New York and Chicago, perhaps even Boston. How it would work for Medford, Framingham, Brookline Village, and Marlboro, Mass., is another story.

This 57 billion dollar plan apparently starts by tearing down all the buildings and tearing up all the streets, thus leaving a free hand for our Utopians. "The model city envisions buildings 2000 feet tall grouped at natural focal points of traffic with intervening parks and open spaces. A network of elevated express boulevards is superimposed on a ground level street system for local traffic. Ramps run from the local thoroughfares to the express lanes. Arterial streets cross at different levels.

Human Cussedness Causes the Troubles

Dost like the picture, love?

Well, I shant live to see it. The year 1960 strikes me as somewhat wishful thinking. Maybe we can make a start by then in one or two big cities. But when I think of Worcester, Mass., and Providence—the most difficult city to make your way through in these parts—and Portland, Maine, I hae me doots.

Another way to bring about much the same results would be to put a lot of careless drivers in jail and keep them there for a long, long time. The trouble is not with our existing traffic layout but with the eternal cussedness of human nature. Over a period of 43 years even human nature might be disciplined into care. Fifty billion dollars might make a start at that, with less dirt and danger and confusion. Of course there wouldn't be so much in it for the traffic engineers.

Jim Hogan Of Lowell Rises

Leaps Into Fame as Director

Today Ann Marsters, Boston's girl reporter, introduces you to Jimmy Hogan, film director, in her new series on Hollywood. In his spectacular rise to fame within the short space of a year, Miss Marsters finds reflections of his early boyhood in Lowell, dominated by a spirit of restlessness that sent him out into life at an early age as a runaway—to battle against odds and finally win out—all his hardships contributing their share in teaching him how to be a great director. Follow this series daily in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

CHAPTER XI

Hollywood, Cal., June 3—This is to introduce you to Jimmy Hogan, Hollywood director.

He was born in Lowell, Massachusetts, on Worthen street.

He is the kind of person you'd like to know—a man with a vivid personality, an agile brain, and a grand sense of humor.

In appearance, he is fairly tall and slim. He has a rugged face, with little quirks in his features which clearly express his personality.

The lines of his face have a weather-beaten, determined quality, as though he were used to "roughing it" a bit; as though he never expected to gain anything without putting up a fight for it.

His smile is slightly crooked, and in his eyes there lurks all the humor and restlessness of the Irish race.

It is that very spirit, as you shall see, which had a great deal to do with landing Hogan where he is today. It is, anyway, the thing that made him an unruly runaway boy and the greatest worry of his father, who was Michael Hogan, a Lowell contractor.

Hogan's career with the motion picture industry began in 1916 when he worked in various capacities with Mary Pickford and Francis X. Bushman. It [illegible] a career that many times might have brought discouragement and resignation to anyone without a bulldog tenacity in his character.

For it has taken all the years between 1916 and now, for Hogan to become really recognized and appreciated as a director.

Spectacular Rise

It is only during the past year that Jimmy Hogan has found his place in the sun. In that time he has come up from the poorest grade of pictures to the highest.

Now he is in the midst of directing his first "A" picture for Paramount. It is "Last Train from Madrid," an ambitious production with Dorothy Lamour, Gilbert Roland and Lew Ayres.

And just the other day he learned that his next assignment will be "Ebb Tide," which will be filmed in Technicolor, and which Paramount looks upon as one of the big pictures of the coming year.

Hogan, taking time off from the business of directing, began the story of his career by telling us something about that runaway son of Michael Hogan's.

"I was a tough little brat," he said, "with a great yearning to see the world. I hated school, the way a wild animal hates a cage, and I was forever running away and being sent home again by policemen with kind intentions.

"The only bit of actual schooling I ever received was at the Brothers' Parochial school in Lowell. I went there until I was ten years old. And I received my religious training at St. Patrick's Church, in Suffolk street. I am happy to say that I was confirmed in that church by Archbishop O'Connell (who is now, of course, the Cardinal)."

Hogan got his first sight of Boston when he was nine years old. He arrived from Lowell on a freight train with three other boys. They had 35 cents between them which took them to Revere, then to Charlestown — then to the Charlestown police station, from which they were escorted home. (That just gives you an idea of the kind of lad this Jimmy Hogan was.)

Anyway, one of the most significant days in Hogan's life occurred when he was 10 years old.

"On the morning of that day," he said, "I got up very early, tucked my shine box under my arm and ran away from home—not to return until several years later when I appeared at the Lowell Opera House as an actor."

Yes, out into the world went young Jimmy Hogan in search of his fortune. He got as far as Waltham, where he joined up with a Dog and Pony show as a waiter in the cook tent.

For three years he stayed with the show, traveling through New England and eastern Canada. But the restless soul of young Hogan began to itch for other scenes.

"So," continued Hogan, "I went to New York and became a property boy at the old Daly Theater on 34th street.

New England Tour

"And when I was 14, I joined James Kirkwood's stock company as an actor. We went on tour through New England, taking in Springfield, Fall River, Boston, Worcester, Lawrence and Lowell.

"I might as well say that my family had become very much in awe of me by that time, and no one made any attempt to drag me back to school. I was a man of the world—and boyhood was a thing of the past."

When the [illegible] expired Hogan [illegible] has a [illegible] adventure he was [illegible] New York Yankee [illegible].

But Hogan missed [illegible] with the Yankees because [illegible] before it was [illegible] and was injured.

Some call it fate and some call it chance but [illegible] that which can turn a potential [illegible]

At the next step [illegible] the Mary Pickford [illegible] was assistant director [illegible] was John Emerson [illegible] a producer at [illegible].

"Emerson helped me a great deal in many ways," said Hogan. "For one thing, he gave me the right kind of books to read and helped me to be something more than just an adventurous ignoramus."

[illegible] was making [illegible] Emerson became [illegible] the picture.

[illegible] assistant director on Douglas Fairbanks earlier pictures.

Enlisted in War

Then he enlisted in the coast artillery for the World War [illegible] landed in the guardhouse [illegible] trying to [illegible] France—but they sent him to [illegible] instead.

"After the war," Hogan went on, "I freelanced in Hollywood as a director—but I couldn't seem to get a chance at anything but B and C grade pictures.

"Anyway, I wrote and directed a picture that made a million dollars. It was 'Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?' I got the idea for it when I was a little boy and attended a temperance meeting in Lowell.

"But I didn't make the million dollars. I sold my rights to the picture for $21,000."

Still, that was something. It was enough to turn Hogan into an independent producer for an independent market.

"Things were going along pretty well," he said. "But then came the panic in the motion picture world. The talkies arrived.

"And there I was, stuck with four silent pictures on my hands. I lost about every penny I had, and the future looked very black."

Hogan managed somehow to keep on eating and in 19[illegible] he came to Paramount as an assistant director. That same year he was made a full director and assigned to make Westerns.

But [illegible] kept a good director [illegible] the shade [illegible] though Hogan was [illegible] just one cowboy picture after another.

First Big Chance

A few weeks ago he was given [illegible]

He was [illegible] when he took over the direction of "Last Train from Madrid." From the very first [illegible] that they decided Hogan was the man to guide the destiny of "Ebb Tide."

So Hollywood has a new ace director, and Lowell has a native son who has at last reached the top of his profession.

Hogan's family is very proud of him [illegible] in a heavy [illegible]

"By a family" Hogan means his brother William who is an attorney in Malden, a sister May who lives in [illegible] road, Brookline and his uncle Joe [illegible] who has a machinery company in Somerville and Charlestown.

Jimmy is apparently the only member of his family who was ever touched by a restless, roving spirit, which deprived him of a normal, conventional boyhood.

"I did lead a pretty rough and tumble existence all through my youth," he said. "But every experience I've had with life has had its share in teaching me how to be a director.

"Experience teaches you to be human—and a director's job is to see just how human he can make an actor appear."

And it is, Hogan confided, occasionally quite a task to bring an actor down to earth and make him realize that he is, after all, just another human being.

(Tomorrow—Ann Marsters visits with Alice Faye, singing star of "Wake Up and Live," who tells how she acquired her new personality and what part it played in her latest success.)

ANN MARSTERS JIMMY HOGAN

Jimmy Hogan, Lowell runaway boy, who now awes his Massachusetts relatives with his newly-found magnificence, tells Ann Marsters, Boston girl reporter, on a Paramount stage, how he battled to win recognition in films after years of discouragement. He's now an ace director and will direct "Ebb Tide" in technicolor as his next assignment.

On the other hand, many letters from C[illegible] come in with the names correct but the exchanges and numbers where the street addresses ought to be.

That's no problem at all to Mr. Forknall. He knows they are sent out by Cuban lottery promoters who are using Boston telephone directories as sucker lists. They are thrown away.

'DIZZY' DEAN REFUSES TO APOLOGIZE TO PRES. FRICK

'Gang' Riled Over Dizzy Dean's Suspension

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS
NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

AUSTEN LAKE

N. L. President
Punishes Dizzy Dean
By Instalments

AUSTEN LAKE

THE YOUNG PRESIDENT OF THE NATIONAL League, Mr. Ford Frick, has finally reached for the Flit and extinguished Dizzy Dean with a well-aimed squirt. But he didn't paralyze Dizzy's voice, and the screams you hear are the calliope yells of the Dean family, Mr. and Mrs., threatening to quit baseball and live on government relief.

In suspending Dean for "conduct prejudicial to the best interests of baseball," Frick is as vague as he was ten days ago when he fined Dizzy $50 for "conduct tending to incite a riot." One dastardly plus another dastardly makes very dastardly indeed.

What probably happened was this. After Dean had heaved an armful of beanballs at the head of the New York Giants on May 20 and followed it with volleys of uncouth language, Frick purposely glossed the affair over with a nominal fine and hoped that Dizzy would behave for a few weeks.

A week ago Dizzy offered $1000 to any newspaper man who would print what he thought of Frick in his own pictorial phrasings. No newsman accepted.

Even then Frick ignored the insult, and Dean continued to beat like somebody's pet calf while the press printed his idiocies and [illegible] him on with little typographical prods.

Then, suddenly, Mickey Cochrane was beaned in the adjoining league and lay for days close to the shadow. And just as suddenly the enormity of Dean's beaning attempt came back to Frick so that he nibbled his nails in his office, thinking how he had muffed his disciplinary test. So he decided to add a belated corollary to the first punishment and gave Diz another dose.

* * *

Dizzy's Delusions

DEAN HAD IT COMING. In fact disciplinary action has been overdue for some years. His antics have been published ad nauseum by an indulgent press until he has become the same sort of [illegible] grandstand inebriate who carries boisterous comedy beyond the limits of boredom.

Dizzy has one flaw. Nature, which equipped him with abnormal physical powers and jungle cunning, skimped his cerebral gifts and made him a full fashioned adult of early mental age. And Mrs. Dean, a woman of great energy, completed the misproportion between her husband's head and muscle by over-feeding his vanity.

Dizzy is a pronounced case of megalomania, delusions of grandeur. His conception of himself is bigger than the team for which he plays, bigger than the president of the league and bigger than the game.

His is an ailment not unusual in baseball where success has come more swiftly than the capacity to assimulate, and one which Babe Ruth suffered in his unregenerate day before he took moral stock and water for his drink.

The fundamental difference between Ruth and Dean was that the Babe was naturally joyous and generous and merely celebrated his easy money a good deal the same way that this nation celebrated with government extravagance since the boom years. But, under his muscular genius Dean is a lugubrious goof of the small-town alec type, who has a strain of malicious mischief and a strange absence of humor.

Like most practical jokers, Dizzy cannot abide a strenuous joke on himself, and once during an epidemic of hop-toads in his shoes and grass-snakes in his bed threatened to quit the club unless given protection.

* * *

Mrs Dean, Doctor of Psychiatrics

THE SECOND MRS. RUTH WAS A SHREWD, determined lady, who diagnosed her husband's trouble as a malignant case of monkey business, for which the only known cure was patroling him like a lady policeman. But Mrs. Dean acted as an indulgent governess with an hysterical child and pampered her slap-happy spouse with egotistical oils until he fattened like an over-ripe grape.

She regarded him as a great artist in his line and conceded him the same rights to a temperament as any other genius.

She encouraged his emotional outbursts on the ball field as a sanitary escape from the pressure which boiled inside his system and which, if repressed, might erupt in less wholesome outlet.

To her it was a plain case of psychiatrics and the choice of having a fractious husband at home or a cantankerous character on the ball field. She chose wisely.

So Dean has developed no taste for frisky liquids or after-dark prowlings in the hot spot areas. The cure which Mrs. Ruth effected by force in Babe's athletic twilight, Mrs. Dean achieved by silken subtlety in the high tide of Dizzy's sun.

By encouraging him to expel his inner poisons in the park she kept him docile at home and accumulated his assets in insurance trusts.

* * *

Bo-Peep!

THE TROUBLE WITH THIS ARRANGEMENT is that Dizzy sometimes let off an extemporaneous screech which landed the partnership in trouble, as was the case when he offered a thousand G's to any journalist who would publish his opinion of Frick.

It was the cocky nonsense of a schoolboy which, if Mrs. Dean had caught him in time, she would have smothered by saying, "Granting honey, that we consider him a louse, still . . ." And the temptation would have fizzled.

So now, while he is under suspension, she will seem to be helping him yell for the sake of domestic felicity, but actually she will be shushing him so that his yells will be neither so loud nor so sharp that he will yell himself out of more than a moderate amount of salary.

And in the end, like Mistress Bo-Peep, she will haul him back wagging his tail, realizing that Diz can make more in a season of ball pitching than he can in a lifetime of hoeing hominy.

She is astute enough neither to let the happiness of her hearth nor the width of the family bankroll grow leaner. And I, for one, wish her luck.

Frick Clips Wings
Of Leading Hurler of Potential Champs

"For the best interests of baseball," according to President Ford Frick of the National League, we have that peerless pitcher of our professional pastime—Jerome "Dizzy" Dean, classed as just another spectator. Unless "The Great One" can settle his differences with the "front office," he may become a familiar grandstand figure. The St. Louis Cardinals ace hurler is pictured as he cheered his mates to a score in the game with the Brooklyn Dodgers. When the Brooklyn club scored, Dean began a bit of grandstand master-minding but to no avail. That far-away look in Dean's eyes came as he felt his club slipping below the .500 mark in the league standing—a poor fourth place.

25,000 Bet $207,786 ON DOGS

Greyhound racing is back—and how!

The largest crowd ever to jam a track in this section of the country flocked into Wonderland Park Revere for the gala opening of the Bay State Greyhound Association.

Estimated at better than 25,000 the huge throng not only smashed all attendance figures but also set up a new opening day high for mutuel figures.

Those machines kept clicking a very merry tune all evening, and the final check in the financial quarters showed that a total of $207,786 had passed through the windows.

These figures show an improvement of $56,835 over the record opening night handle of last year.

NOT A FAVORITE WINS

The total might have been much higher except for the chill winds which sent many scurrying home after the first half of the card.

Going into the sixth race, the handle was slightly ahead of the all time mark of $231,454, made on the closing night last year. In the last five races, however, the handle fell off.

Even though the all time high was not shattered, the Revere officials were jubilant. The crowd and handle for the opening of the third year of greyhound racing in Massachusetts actually exceeded their expectations.

Their one regret was the 'pups' did not run a bit better to form. Not a favorite came through all evening.

The actual race program was highlighted by the eighth race feature which was the 'Inaugural.' Tempest, the favorite of the Revere fans all last year and the second choice in betting, captured the big event.

DAILY DOUBLE $136.20

Court Jester went off the favorite but the Dow Kennel speedster, which was the outstanding dog in Florida last winter, could not escape trouble all the way and finished out of the money. Tempest broke well, got clear on the first turn and then set sail for home.

The daily double found 74 winning tickets collecting a nice price of $136.20 on Friendly Shoe in the first race and Archie Bowen in the second.

It was a gala opening, and all went well—except for those lads and lassies who wager on form pups.

Cards Dare Frick To Visit Them On Bench

New York, June 3 (US)—Jerome Herman "Dizzy" Dean, star pitcher of the St. Louis Cardinals, today stood indefinitely suspended by Ford C. Frick, president of the National League, for "conduct detrimental to the best interests of baseball."

Making his startling announcement, Frick issued only the statement, which read:

"For conduct detrimental to the best interests of baseball, player J. H. Dean was suspended indefinitely.

(Signed) Ford C. Frick,
President."

Frick declined to elaborate on the statement but it was understood in baseball circles that the suspension is a direct result of the fight between the Cardinals and the New York Giants in St. Louis two weeks ago.

DIZ BUBBLES TOO MUCH

Dean, pitching for the Cardinals that day had tossed what appeared to be an intentional "bean ball" at Jim Ripple, Giant outfielder, and in a play at first Dean and Ripple clashed, precipitating a near-riot that resulted in $50 fines being handed out to both Dean and Ripple.

The fight itself was promptly forgotten but Dean insisted that Frick was enforcing the newly-installed balk rule especially against him.

Among his remarks following the fight, Dean was quoted as saying "I will pay $1,000 to any newspaperman who prints my opinion of Frick."

Dean also was reported saying that "any player who was afraid of being beaned was a sissy."

"IT'S MY BAT

That, of course, was before the accidental and almost fatal "beaning" of Mickey Cochrane, manager of the Detroit Tigers.

More recently, Dean, after losing a game to the Chicago Cubs on Memorial Day, refused to board the train with his team for the East and threatened to quit baseball.

It was only after a brief but effective argument from his wife that Dean changed his mind.

Among the other sayings contributed by the eccentric right-hander was that he wouldn't play in the major league all-star game. [illegible] statement was made immediately after the Cardinal-Giant brawl and indicated that without Dean there wouldn't be an all-star game.

Ernest Quigley, supervisor of National League umpires, personally served Dean with his suspension order at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn shortly before the Cardinals took the field against the Dodgers.

He also handed Dean a form of written apology, dictated by Frick, to be signed by the player.

The length of the suspension will be determined by the stubborness of Dizzy's opposition to Frick's ultimatum. In a clubhouse interview, Dizzy emphatically declared.

ON CARPET TODAY

"I'll never sign any such paper. I never said the things he wants me to apologize for."

Before cracking down on baseball's leading "pop off" specialist Frick was in telephonic communication with Frankie Frisch, manager of the Cards.

Frisch and Dean have been instructed to report at the National League offices at 11 o'clock today. Frick stated:

"If Dean comes in and apologizes to the league and its officers, he will pave the way for the lifting of his suspension in-suspension would continue indefinitely.

Frick issued this formal announcement at the conclusion of the conference.

"At a conference this morning between Manager Frank Frisch, Secretary Clarence F. Lloyd and Player Dean of the St. Louis club and the president of the National League, all statements, purported to have been made by Mr. Dean and quoted in the press, reflecting upon the integrity and honesty of the National League office and umpires, were discussed thoroughly.

"Mr. Dean made a blanket denial of ever having made any of the statements and said he had not at any time made such statemenets to the press.

"He refused however, to sign a public statement refuting the alleged remarks, or any other statement that he was misquoted. As a result, it is the ruling of the National League office that player Dean remain under indefinite suspension."

DAWNPLAY Best Filly OF YEAR

By Associated Press

Dawn Play, a daughter of Clock Tower from Robert J. Kleberg's King ranch of Texas, will do as the champion three-year-old filly of the East until a better one comes along.

Known as the hard luck filly of 1936, Dawn Play has won two rich stakes within the last week. She followed up her score in the mile of the Acorn by taking the mile and three-eighths of the Coaching Club American Oaks at Belmont Park yesterday.

The Max Hirsch trained filly not only threatened the record for the event with time of 2:18 4-5, but spread-eagled her field, including the Wheatley stable's highly regarded Drawbridge, to pay 9 to 2. Six lengths separated the pair at the finish.

The victory, worth $10,875, ran her earnings for the year to $20,875, as compared to only $4525 as a juvenile.

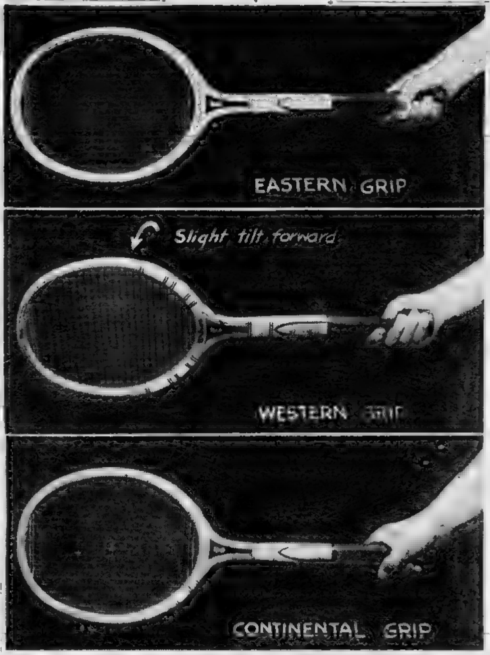
Pro Net Champion Demonstrates Grips



Here is a closeup of the three grips used in tennis, demonstrated by Ellsworth Vines, professional tennis champion. Vines favors the Eastern grip which he says is used by 95 per cent of all the ranking players today. Fred Perry and Rene LaCoste favor the Continental grip.

Vines Likes Eastern Grip

Adaptable to Every Court

The best tennis grips are described in the third article of this series on "How to play better tennis" by Ellsworth Vines, world professional tennis champion.

By ELLSWORTH VINES

[illegible]

There are three different types of tennis grips which a player can use to advantage.

First, the Continental grip favored by Rene LaCoste, Karl Kozeluh and Fred Perry.

Second, the Western grip, now somewhat out of style, [illegible] Johnston, Maurice McLoughlin and George Lott.

The third grip is the Eastern grip favored [illegible] per cent of the ranking players of today, [illegible] Donald Budge, Wilmer Allison [illegible]

[illegible] reason for [illegible] preference [illegible]

HOW TO HOLD RACQUET

You are also able to [illegible]

[illegible] this grip for [illegible] throw [illegible] pointing forward. Then [illegible] shake hands and there you have the Eastern grip.

[illegible]

[illegible] racquet flat on the floor and simply reaching down and picking it up.

This grip is very good for high balls on the forehand side and on the backhand side.

But for any ball that must be hit below the waistline it is difficult to execute because the face of the racquet has a tendency to be tilted downward on these low balls, thus many times driving the ball into the bottom of the net.

It is [illegible] to chop or volley successfully with this type of grip. This grip causes the player to shift his hand many times during the course of the game adding to his confusion and poor execution.

DEMANDS STRONG WRIST

[illegible]

My objection to the Continental grip is that with your grip on top of the handle as I described the player must pull the racquet [illegible]

KEEP TIGHT GRIP

This grip is fine for low balls but is not so good for a shoulder high ball. It is hard to get much speed on the forehand side due to the fact you tend to scoop the ball.

[illegible] way of shots with this grip than with the Eastern grip.

Now we come to the actual playing of the game with the Eastern grip.

Keep a tight grip on your racquet at all times except when waiting for the ball to be returned to you. [illegible] hand and arm a chance.

I cannot emphasize this last point too greatly.

(Tomorrow's article deals with forehand drives.)

Possibly the last straw was a story that appeared May 26 in the Belleville (Ill.) Daily Advocate in which Dean was quoted as making disparaging remarks about Barr and Frick.

Further down in the story as published and attributed to Dean was a reference to "our great little president (Frick) and a pain in the neck to me."

Dean denied everything. He said:

"Why I never said anything like that. Why it was a church affair and you couldn't use any language like that in church, could you?"

From the rear of a group in the clubhouse came a voice:

"I don't know, Dizz, you might."

Frick further revealed that he had telephoned Sam Breadon, president of the St. Louis club, before announcing his decision [illegible] Breadon later refused to confirm [illegible] Frick added:

"Dean has been asking for this a long time. It's time for a showdown on whether he is bigger than the National League. I don't think he is."

"Nobody can say I ever threw a ball deliberately at a batter's head. How can anybody prove those things are done deliberately?"

[illegible]

The entire gas house gang, bitter over the banishment of their star pitcher, who was to take his turn against Brooklyn today, issued an open challenge to Mr. Frick to visit them on the bench when they appear at the Polo Grounds against the Giants.

BEES SEND FETTE AGAINST PIRATES

ACE
Beaten Only ONCE

BEST ROOKIE OF SEASON

By JOE CASHMAN

Manager Bill McKechnie was smart in deciding to wait until this afternoon to chase Lou Fette, his freshman ace, in against the league-leading Pittsburgh Pirates, only club to beat Lou in six starts to date.

Had the sensation from St. Paul stepped out at the Bees homecoming the best he could have earned would have been a tie, and he'd have had to pitch scoreless ball to get that.

[illegible]

SLUGGERS FAIL IN PINCH

[illegible] the [illegible] were [illegible] defeat in 15 [illegible] games and their second straight [illegible] at the hands of the [illegible] Mr. Blanton.

The same [illegible] men who [illegible] all kinds of [illegible] the [illegible] get the ball out of the [illegible] own ball [illegible].

Twice there were Bees on second and third with only one out. Two long flies would have tied the score. They couldn't even get one.

And it wasn't weak sisters who failed in either instance. It was the power swingers, like little Gene Moore, Wally Berger and Al Lopez.

In fact, only three of the Swarm connected safely against Blanton all afternoon. Tony Cuccinello collected three safe blows. Deus Garms came through with two and Rabbit Warstler fashioned one.

Whatever it is, it's evident there's some Apiary curse on the Bees which they haven't as yet been able to rout.

FETTE'S FINE RECORD

Maybe Fette will be able to turn the trick this p. m. Undefeated thus far on the trails, Lou has a .500 average at home.

He silenced the St. Louis Gas House Gang with three hits in his first local appearance, but the very next day his mates went into a tailspin. This resulted in seven straight losses, and he was charged with one of these, when the Pirates cashed in on a first inning break to beat him, 4 to 2.

Lou had no business to be licked that afternoon, and he hopes to prove it to the complete satisfaction of all who turn out to watch him today.

His opponent on this occasion will be none other than Ed Brandt, erstwhile Braves southpaw mainstay, which gives the natives a chance to make good a boast they've been uttering ever since the Bucs were last in town.

Brandt pitched the opening game of that series and was very lucky to win. Or, at least, that's what the McKechniemen claimed, and they've been promising since to pin his ears back the very next time he faced them.

They won't have to score more than two or three runs against him to win if Fette is in form.

In three of his wins, Lou yielded only one tally. In another he allowed but three in ten innings. He was found for five in his first win but had the Dodgers shut out until he was ordered to take it a little easy with an eight run lead in the fifth.

SCOUTS MUFF ONE

Only three earned runs were scored against him in his one defeat, [illegible] the Bucs [illegible] a drive [illegible].

Yes [illegible] quite a pitcher [illegible] the most promising [illegible] either Boston club this season.

Why he was allowed to languish in the minors [illegible] always remain a mystery [illegible] major league manager [illegible] seen him in action [illegible].

CASEYS, Civics in Park TWI FEATURES

Dick Caseys [illegible] straight wins and the Brighton Civics, with four wins in succession, will play the feature game tonight in the four bill in the Boston Park League.

The Caseys are down to play at their home field at Neponset against St. Augustines, who have slipped a bit after setting the loop ablaze by an early streak of seven straight wins.

The "Saints" dropped two games this week to the fast-coming Mass Knitting with Hal Cheney getting the business from the Six Sox last night. However, Bill Benson always likes to win at Neponset and will trot out his ace, Ken Coburn, to go against the strongest lineup the Dorchester solon will have fielded this season.

Jesse Brown will toe the mound, with Bub Walsh behind the plate. Dan Cosgrove of Cambridge, just back from Buffalo, will play first base in place of Sullivan, who has gone to Beaver Falls in the Penn State League.

Dick Blasser, a local boy, who got his start right on Garvey field, will get a warm welcome when he plays his initial twi game after a highly successful year as shortstop on the Holy Cross freshman team.

The Civics, now one point behind the runner-up Jordan outfit in the east section, will play the Roslindale Town club at Healy field. The Townies themselves have taken the last three games, with Paul Healy the current leading man for the popular young club.

Wolfs and Hennigans are down to do battle at Jefferson playgrounds, with Pere Marquettes and Hyde Park twi meeting at Smith Pond in the remaining two games.

Boston wants Ben Chapman and Washington needs Rick Ferrell . . . Something is stirring.

Minnesota can lose seven players by injury or eligibility rules and still have three lines from end to end.

WILSON RATES AGAWAM LIST

By DAVE WILSON

Selections for Fast Track

BEST BET—MADDENING, 7TH

Maddening, third to Revonah and The Triumvir in last race, stands out in the light over five indifferent rivals in the mile and one-sixteenth of today's seventh race at Agawam Park.

FIRST—Joe D., Jim Cornell, Kai Sou

JOE D. finished [illegible] in his last race [illegible] only two lengths [illegible] the Houghton [illegible] last JIM CORNELL [illegible] flashed excellent speed during the past winter's racing at New Orleans. KAI SOU, a brisk morning worker for the remainder.

SECOND RACE
Spittenimage, Tomah, Old Dominion

SPITTENIMAGE [illegible] yesterday's card to await this [illegible] spot. The [illegible] needs only to duplicate top Maryland form. TOMAH third to [illegible] and Golden Key in last [illegible] figures slightly better than OLD DOMINION in the fight for place honors.

THIRD RACE—Toothpick, Indiana, Pirate Lass

TOOTHPICK, on general Maryland form, shapes up superior to this cheap field. INDIANA second to Bareback at Pimlico figures real close in what appears to be a two horse race. PIRATE LASS a well-bred truck comes strongly recommended by the clockers.

FOURTH—Buddies, Night Watch, May Music.

BUDDIES gets the edge in this number on top New York race. Barring racing misfortune, he figures never to leave the result in doubt. NIGHT WATCH, away since last year, comes strongly recommended by the clockers. MAY MUSIC, fast and faint hearted, shapes up next best.

FIFTH—Shebang, Pegotty Ann, Ebon Ze.

aA and M J Cremer entry.

Shooting for a price and expect to get it if SHEBANG avoids early interference. The opposition is little more than she drubbed at Pimlico. PEGOTTY ANN, on class alone, shapes up well in the fight for place honors. EBON ZE hails from a smart outfit and will bear watching.

SIXTH—Unheralded, Bred in Blue, Casinghead.

UNHERALDED, second to Joan Asbestos at Pimlico, needs only to turn in a carbon copy of that recent effort to grace the winner's circle. Contention, if any, may be furnished by BRED IN BLUE. The latter is dropping down several notches. CASINGHEAD may improve enough to save show honors.

SEVENTH—Maddening, Bird Lore, Racketeer

MADDENING will have BIRD LORE to down for major honors. The latter displayed keen early foot in his last race, but tired badly in the stretch as if a trifle shy on racing condition. RACKETEER shapes up well in the fight for the balance of the spoils.

EIGHTH—Grandma's Boy, Swift Queen, Tambov

GRANDMA'S BOY, SWIFT QUEEN and TAMBOV figure pretty much alike. I'm going to tempt fate by rating them as named.

Trackman's Parlay

Palamede, Latonia, 6th.
Newark, Belmont, 3rd.

And They All Answer to the Name of Davis

The Williams Kennel greyhounds have all been given a last name of Davis with varying first names. All eight will race at the West Springfield meeting which gets underway next Monday night. Mrs. E. L. Williams is shown with the greyhounds.

Medford Greater Boston Champ

Another schoolboy league race has been settled bringing the total to five. Only two more loops, who have likely candidates for the third annual eastern Massachusetts Interscholastic title next week have yet to be decided.

Medford high, by virtue of a 10 to 1 win over Malden's Golden Tornado yesterday afternoon at the Fulton street grounds, tucked away the Greater Boston title.

Only two more schoolboy circuits, which most likely will have candidates for this outstanding tourney, have yet to be settled. They are the Catholic and Boston city leagues.

Lynn English's undefeated record will be endangered this afternoon, when they meet Beverly at Lynn.

A toast to the English High track team. Bill Ohrenberger's boys again regained undisputed title of being the outstanding track team among the city schools as they won the annual "Reggie" meet at University Heights with a total of 78 points. Mechanic Arts finished in second place with 51 19-20 points, followed by Roxbury Memorial's 39 2-5.

As it was expected, the meet was between English and Mechanic Arts. Both teams finished yesterday's final running events with 36 points. But the Blue and Blue entered the meet with a 27-point lead which they garnered in the field events.

In concluding the outdoor track season for the Boston schools, only one record was broken. That came in the Class B 440-yard run at Walter Hall of English broke his own record which he established in the running trials last week as he was clocked in 52.2.

Nine records were equalled, however. These were in the Class B C and D hurdles; in the four dashes and in the Class B 220 and C 110.

The other point scorers were Hyde Park, 23 9-10; Trade and Latin, tied with 19 points apiece, East Boston, 13; Commerce [illegible], Jamaica Plain, 12; Roslindale, 11; Dorcester, 10½; South Boston, 1 and Brighton, 5.

Clarence Ammiott [illegible] of the [illegible] run off on Saturday [illegible] the four divisions.

Because of the Regiment [illegible] yesterday afternoon [illegible] scheduled between [illegible] and Waltham was put off until today.

Arlington, Peabody, Worcester Commerce and Dartmouth high near New Bedford, golf champions of their respective districts, will open competition for a play-off of the state championship this afternoon at the Municipal links in Brookline and will continue until tomorrow.

West Point Coach Promoted

Washington, June 3 (AP)—The War Department announced today the promotion of First Lieutenant [illegible] H. [illegible] head football coach at West Point to captain in the corps of engineers, effective June 14.

O'HARA To Face L. I. U.

The Boston College baseball team will attempt to get back into the win column tomorrow at University Heights, when Coach McCrehan sends in Charlie O'Hara against the strong Long Island University nine, which will be after its 21st win.

The Eagles lost a tough game to the Blackbirds in New York last month with O'Hara pitching. Charlie limited L. I. U. to four hits but Bud Pearlman their ace held the Eagles to two hits, one a ninth-inning homer by Bob Cash, and Boston College lost the game by a 2 to 1 count.

Pearlman, who defeated Northeastern, 9 to 2, in Boston last Tuesday, will oppose the Eagles again tomorrow.

John "Muggsy" Kelley, junior left-hand ace of the B. C. mound corps, has a strained back, which may keep him out of the Providence game Saturday and the remaining two Holy Cross battles.

Kelley has defeated Providence and Northeastern this season and was slated to twirl against either Providence or Holy Cross in his next start, which makes his loss a serious one for the Eagles.

WILSON'S BEST STARTS IN 5TH

By DAVE WILSON

Selections for Fast Track

BEST BET—PHARLOCH, 5TH

Suffolk Downs, East Boston, June 3 — Pharloch, a 3-year-old son of Pharmond 2d which races for Mrs. R. V. Hooper, stands head and shoulders over five rivals of his own age in the mile and one-sixteenth of the $1500 added Jamaica Handicap, fifth and featured number here today.

Pharloch gets into the feature [illegible] spotted under [illegible] pounds. This was [illegible] Osman Roll—to insure brackets. [illegible]

FIRST — Sky Hostess, Post Meridian, Lady Bessie

SKY HOSTESS [illegible] Havre de Grace needs only to duplicate brisk trials to graduate at he first asking. POST MERIDIAN a sluggish beginner, is the class of the race. Under a hustling ride [illegible] LADY BESSIE for place honors. The latter turned in a bangup second to Sun Celerina in her most recent start.

SECOND—Squawker, Miss Trophy, Dedication

SQUAWKER, which couldn't untrack herself in the mud the other day, needs only to race back to good Narragansett form. MISS TROPHY displayed keen early foot in [illegible] like an [illegible] in the stretch drive. DEDICATION drubbed Merovech and others in his final outing at Narragansett.

THIRD—Sure Cloud, Last Lay, Third Party

SURE CLOUD was pitted too highly in the Old Colony stakes at Narragansett Park. In front of that the son of High Cloud stepped four furlongs in 47 3, only one-fifth off the track mark. LAST DAY [illegible] to Miss Apprehend in last race shapes up slightly better than THIRD PARTY.

FOURTH—Tonianna, Maestrom, Zor

TONIANNA, running like a "wild horse," had clockers goggle-eyed [illegible] morning when she worked a mile in 1:41 4. MAESTROM, pitted too highly in last race, gets the next best figure on previous top form. ZOR was a beaten favorite in better company the other day.

FIFTH—Pharloch, Peplum, Virnock

If anything bands PHARLOCH [illegible] PEPLUM. The latter failed to show a thing this spring in two starts on New York tracks but brisk trials suggest a vastly improved effort. VIRNOCK, stepping up, must be accorded a mild chance on recent [illegible]

SIXTH—Singers Folly, Piccolo, Tugboat Frank

SINGERS FOLLY third to Blackbirder and Cascapedia in his Narragansett final, needs only to [illegible] PICCOLO [illegible] the class. However [illegible] TUGBOAT FRANK [illegible] was [illegible] better than the cold dope reveals.

SEVENTH—Slavonia, Ridge Mor, Dreel

SLAVONIA picked up 114 pounds and [illegible] six furlongs in 1:12 [illegible] of the fastest races of the current meeting—to lead home M[illegible] and others in her last [illegible] RIDGE MOR [illegible] DREEL, a dead [illegible] to Mixwell and [illegible]

EIGHTH RACE—Sir Thomas, Abbot's Last, Balaphin

MR. BOSTON

Can't Keep 'Em From Dog Track

25,000 Crowd Bets $207,786

By JACK CONWAY

I HAVE BECOME thoroughly convinced, after watching the opening of the dog race season at Wonderland Park, that the surest way to make anything a tremendous success is by telling the public it isn't good for it.

When dog racing first came to Massachusetts there were numerous persons and groups who made bitter attacks on the sport.

Some of those who were against dog racing at the start are still tossing rocks at the sport, but, judging from the crowd of 25,000 persons at the Revere opening the public likes its dog racing as well as it does the hot ones which have mustard and pickles on them.

Mr. Boston

[illegible]

It was a gay betting crowd which poured $207,786 into the hungry mutuel machines. I don't know where ol' Jawn Public is getting all the sugar he is wagering on horse and dog races, but he certainly isn't broke and he is still trying to pick winners.

YOUTH LIKES DOG RACES

I HAVE [illegible]

[illegible]

You don't [illegible] The horse players [illegible] winners for [illegible]

The average dog fan works afternoons, and only can go to a horse track on a Saturday or holiday.

They must necessarily do most of their betting at night, and they will argue by the hour that dog racing has horse racing beaten a hundred different ways.

Horse race fans will give you another argument, which is why there are enough cash customers for both sports.

COLOR AT TRACK OPENING

THERE WAS [illegible]

The owners of the Revere dog track will make more than a million dollars this year. There is no racing plant in the world that compares with Wonderland Park in the matter of financial profit.

The great horse tracks like Santa Anita, Suffolk Downs, Hialeah Park, Narragansett Park and Belmont Park will not equal the profit of Wonderland Park this year.

[illegible]

"Rip" took time out to say he is still trying to match Al McCoy, New England heavyweight champion, with Natie Brown of Washington. Valenti is hopeful of getting Joe Louis to come to Boston this year and believes a McCoy-Brown bout winner would be a suitable opponent [illegible]

"Young" Happy, of course, was at the dog opening. I met him at Suffolk Downs the other day and he told me that once the dog race season got underway he would straighten out all of his horse track losses.

Happy was talking to himself after four of his triple A selections had been beaten. Looks as if he will have to go for beano to get even.

Alumnae at Frolic

More than 300 alumnae of Mount Saint Joseph Academy frolicked last night in the Hotel Sheraton Salon, a gay scene overlooking the Charles river at the annual dance the proceeds of which provide a four year scholarship to Regis College in Weston.

It was the last social event of the season for members of the younger set who spent a gay evening filled with pleasant surprises arranged by Miss Kathleen Costello of Brighton and Dorothy Burns of Allston.

Young and attractive graduates sold clusters of spring flowers and noise makers and gaily colored hats enlivened the scene.

Jane Murphy was chairman of the patroness committee, serving with Louise Halloran, chairman of the musical program. Mrs. Catherine Mollison was treasurer and announced that the proceeds of the spring formal were larger than ever before.

The evening's program was featured by the singing of Miss Louise Langone, daughter of Senator Joe Langone. Miss Louise also acted as "master of ceremonies" in a radio program broadcast from the salon during the frolic.

Natalie and Helen Sullivan of Salem took part in the musical program together with Ruth and Mary Shields of Brighton.

FLEETING FLASHES

Don't think you're hearing things when the Yowsahs of the Ol' Maestro named Ben Bernie comes through (WNAC) while "Showboat" is sailing the air waves between 9 and 10 o'clock tonight. He is on deck as a special guest with Lanny Ross.

• • •

Now that Bob Burns is a bridegroom he may take to fashioning fun anent the relatives of "The Mrs." although perhaps not quite so soon. Bob took himself a wife on Memorial Day. Tonight finds him helping Bing Crosby play host to Charlie Ruggles, the hesitant fellow of the films (WNAC) from 10 to 11 p. m.

• • •

Comes a note from a column customer calling himself "Tin Ear Terry" and making mention of the many words used by "mike men" who announce the various dance orchestra offerings late at night. Most of them state how "so and so will sing the vocal" when they make known a piece about to be played. Surely an artist couldn't whistle a vocal, claims "Terry," and verily, he has said something.

• • •

Construction of wordage is an art, suggests still another observant outlander, who good-naturedly writes "talk is just like paint; it should be trusted only by an artist" and that thought might well be placarded for hanging on the office wall of many a radio program planner.

TURNS TONIGHT

Enacting a tragedy of small town life in England, Pauline Lord and Kenneth MacKenna, stars of the stage, will be presented by Kate Smith in a condensation of Clement Dane's prize-winning play, "The Mariners," on her "Bandwagon" broadcast (WEEI) this evening from 8.00 to 9.00 p. m.

• • •

Jean Sablon, France's romantic troubadour, will be guest soloist during the "Ridin' High" program with Ray Sinatra's orchestra, (WBZ) tonight at 7.15 p. m. In addition to Sablon, the program will present Jacques Fray and Mario Braggiotti, popular piano team, in their own arrangements of selected popular melodies.

• • •

The Boston Symphony Orchestra one of the country's outstanding musical organizations, now conducted by Arthur Fiedler, will be heard in another "Pop" concert (WBZ) this evening from 8.30 to 9.30 p. m. Broadcast from Symphony hall, Boston, these "Pop" concerts have been networked to the rest of the nation each year since 1931.

• • •

Bob Hope, comedian master-of-ceremonies of the "Tipping Rhythm Revue," will take air-cooled theaters as his text during his broadcast on Sunday, June 6 from 9 to 9.30 p. m. He plans to present a sketch in which his attractive stooge, "Honeychile," acts as an usherette who gets frost-bitten in the middle of July. Bob will then lead a rescue pack of St. Bernards into the theater and save the "frozen patrons" in the balcony.

AL PEARCE IN HUB PERSONAL APPEARANCE

Followers of the radio funmaker Al Pearce, turned out to fill the Boston Opera House last night, to "Watch the Fun Go By" as per his weekly program title Pearce held forth in person with his versatile troupe to the complete satisfaction of the audience.

Al mastered the ceremonies from start to finish and kept his variety doings at a speedy tempo throughout. His own "Elmer" characterization of the door to door salesman afforded a highlight, although he cautioned "the boys" present not to adopt his bungling methods as monologued strictly in the spirit of comedy.

SOUTHERN SONGSTRESS

Madge Marley occupied the soloing spotlight with pleasing renditions of current popular song hits, revealing a full blown southern accent to which radio listeners have taken a liking and evidenced enthusiasm by way of abundant applause.

Nick Lucas, veteran troubador of the records and air waves, also a regular with "Al Pearce and His Gang" each Tuesday night on the ether, voiced some of the songs he has had a big part in popularizing in days gone by, namely "Tip Toe Through the Tulips" and "Side By Side."

The burlesque of "Tizzie Lish" by one of the boys in the group prompted a generous measure of response and the "Human Chatterbox" impression by Arline Harris brought the more than two hours of informal merrymaking to a well-timed, leave-'em-laughing close. It was all splendidly staged and entertaining from beginning to end.

PERSONALITY PLUS

Following the stage presentation, Pearce played host to a goodly group of friends and Ford Motor Company dealers at a buffet gathering at the Hotel Kenmore. He made known his formula for microphone funmaking and was willing to allow that the success his "Watch the Fun Go By" broadcasts have attained, is best to be analyzed by the maintenance of a [illegible] type of humor, [illegible] with the every day doings of his hearers.

He holds to the comedy construct[illegible]ed through [illegible] of [illegible]able angles connected with the routine experiences of people at work and in the h[illegible]

STANDARD OIL TRUST BUILT BY BRAINS

By JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, SR.

(Distributed exclusively by Universal Service, by special arrangement with Doubleday Doran & Co., reproduction in whole or in part strictly prohibited.)

The birth of the gigantic Standard Oil trust is described by John D. Rockefeller in the eighth chapter of his dramatic informal autobiography.

In the year 1867 the firms of William R[illegible] & Co., Rockefeller & Andrews, Rockefeller & C[illegible] S. V. Harkness and H. M. Flagler united in [illegible] the firm of Rockefeller, Andrews & Flagler.

[illegible] greater [illegible] and efficiency [illegible] of the smaller [illegible] each had heretofore conducted separately.

Paid Best Wages

As time went on and the possibilities became apparent, we found further capital to be necessary then we [illegible] others and organized the Standard Oil Company with a capital of $1,000,000.

Later we saw that more money could be [illegible] found persons who were willing to invest with us and increased our capital to $2,500,000, in 1872, and afterward in 1874 to $3,500,000.

As the business grew and markets were obtained at home and abroad, more persons and capital were added to the business, and new corporate agencies were obtained or organized, the object being always the same—to extend our operations by furnishing the best and cheapest products.

I ascribe the success of the Standard Oil Company to its consistent policy of making the volume of its business large through the merits and cheapness of its products. It has spared no expense in utilizing the best and most efficient method of manufacture.

It has sought for the best superintendents and workmen and paid the best wages. It has not hesitated to sacrifice old machinery and old plants for new and better ones. It has placed its manufactories at the points where they could supply markets at the least expense.

It has not only sought markets for its principal products, but for all possible by-products, sparing no expense in introducing them to the public in every nook and corner of the world.

It has not hesitated to invest millions of dollars in methods for cheapening the gathering and distribution of oils by pipe-lines, special cars, tank-steamers, and tank-wagons.

We devoted ourselves exclusively to the oil business and its products.

We educated our own men; we trained many of them from boyhood: we strove to keep them loyal by providing them full scope for their ability, they were given opportunities to buy stock, and the company itself helped them to finance their purchases.

In speaking of the real beginning of the Standard Oil Company, it should be remembered that it was not so much the consolidation of the firms in which we had a personal interest, but the coming together of the men who had the combined brain power to do the work.

Perhaps it is worth while to emphasize again the fact that it is not merely capital and "plants" and the strictly material things which make up a business, but the character of the men behind these things, their personalities, and their abilities; these are the essentials to be reckoned with.

Late in 1871, we began the purchase of some of the more important of the refinery interests of Cleveland.

There was one transaction, the purchase of the property of the Backus Oil Company, which has been variously exploited, and I am made to appear as having personally robbed a defenceless widow of an extremely valuable property, paying her therefor only a mere fraction of its worth.

Advised Widow

It is probable that its wide circulation and its acceptance as true by those who know nothing of the facts has awakened more hostility against the Standard Oil Company and against me personally than any charge which has been made.

This is my reason for entering so much into detail in this particular case, which I am exceedingly reluctant to do, and for many years have refrained from doing.

Mr. F. M. Backus, a highly respected citizen of Cleveland and an old and personal friend of mine, had for several years prior to his death in 1874 been engaged in the lubricating oil business which was carried on after his death as a corporation known as the Backus Oil Company.

In the latter part of 1878, our company purchased certain portions of the property of this company.

I personally had nothing to do with the negotiations except that, when the matter first came up, Mrs. Backus requested me to call at her house, which I did, when she spoke of selling the property to our company and requested me to personally conduct the negotiations with her with reference to it. This I was obliged to decline to do, because, as I then explained to her, I was not familiar with the details of the business.

In that conversation I advised her not to take any hasty action.

When she expressed fears about the future of the business, stating, for example, that she could not get cars to transport sufficient oil, I said to her that, though we were using our cars and required them in our business, yet we would loan her any number she needed, and do anything else in reason to assist her.

I did not see why she could not successfully prosecute her business in the future as in the past.

I told her, however, that if after reflection she desired to pursue negotiations for the sale of her property some of our people, familiar with the lubricating oil business, would take up the question with her.

As she still expressed a desire to have our company buy her property, negotiations were taken up by Mr. Jennings, and the only other thing that I had to do with the matter was that when our experts reported that in their judgment the value of the works, good will, and successorship which we had decided to buy were worth a certain sum, I asked them to add $10,000 in order to make doubly sure that she received full value.

The sale as consummated, as we supposed, to the entire satisfaction of Mrs. Backus, and the purchase price which had been agreed upon was paid.

To my profound astonishment, a day or two after the transaction had been closed, I received from her a very unkind letter complaining that she had been unjustly treated . . .

So far as I can see, after more than 30 years have elapsed, there was nothing but the most kindly and considerate treatment of Mrs. Backus on the part of the Standard Oil Company. I regret that Mrs. Backus did not take at least part of her pay in Standard certificates, as we suggested she should do.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

A Nationwide, Organization Devoted To American Youth in Aviation

By L. F. ROSS
Boston Wing Commander

All model builders among Junior Birdmen of this wing will be interested in building a glider, the plans of which will be published in the Birdmen feature section of the Boston Sunday Advertiser this coming Sunday.

The glider is one with which Joseph Hervat of Milwaukee set an unofficial flight record of 39 minutes and 30 seconds, and meets the specifications laid down for the glider event which will be the first event of the wing championship tournament to be held at Franklin Field within a few weeks.

Hervat became the 1935 wing champion in the Milwaukee outdoor meet and was given a free trip to Los Angeles to take part in the national match. He built the glider especially for that meet. On the day of the contest he reported at the field and decided to test his glider.

He failed to ask his timer to clock it, though Junior Birdmen rules permitted him to do so. He clocked the flight himself and got an unexpected thrill when the test flight became an unofficial record flight.

The wing is made of soft balsa and the fuselage of pine. The glider weighs .038 ounces. It is easy to build and is a consistent good performer.

The building of this glider is recommended for all contestants who have entered the wing tournament. It is not impossible for a local Junior Birdman to set a record similar to Hervat with this particular model.

Records of several kinds are expected at this year's wing tournament which will decide the New England outdoor title of 1937 and winner of the all-expense-paid trip to Atlanta, Ga., in August to compete in the national match.

There will be more contestants and more spectators than ever before. There'll be music and broadcasting of the progress of the events. Contestants will wear numbers on their backs, and programs containing these numbers and the names of the model fliers will be distributed so spectators may identify the Birdmen.

All model builders are urged to enter this meet and compete for the main prize and the gold, silver and bronze medals which will be awarded to runners-up. Ace wing-pins, certificates of national records and red and blue ribbon awards for meritorious flights may also be won.

To enter simply send a postal or letter to Junior Birdmen, 100 Summer street, Boston, requesting a free manual. This booklet contains the specifications to which the glider, hand-launched stick model and R O G cabin model must conform, the list of prizes, the rules which will govern the meet and all other necessary information. It also contains an entry blank which should be filled in and returned to wing headquarters as soon as possible.

Early entry is necessary because bulletins giving developments, hints on model building and other "tips," all of keen interest to model builders, will be sent to registered contestants only.

Sponsor Edward Sharkey recently gave a talk before the members of the Diving Hawks squadron of Somerville, commanded by George Calvert. He also drew the names of winners of a raffle instituted to make money for the club treasury. The Diving Hawks and the Flying Jeeps of Cambridge, commanded by John Wilkalis, are soon to hold a model plane flying contest.

* * *

The commander of the Scarlet Skulls squadron of Chelsea, Malcolm Green, has erected a bookcase in the unit clubroom. Junior Birdmen library handbooks will start an aviation library.

A fleet of model planes is being designed, pictures have been hung in the meeting place and secret codes are being developed.

* * *

Peter Torrey, Edward Neville, Robert Coulson, John Glover and Allan Parker have been added to the roster of the Flying Samaritan squadron of the Fessenden school, West Newton. This group is commanded by Kenneth Granger.

* * *

Ten inch Douglas 0-38 plane plans may be secured by sending return postage to Junior Birdmen, 100 Summer street, Boston. These plans were drawn for the Junior Birdmen contest held last February by Herbert K. Weiss, aeronautical engineering student at M. I. T.

HOVEY STYLE SHOW TO FEATURE COTTON

One of the leading features of National Cotton Week is a fashion show which takes place this afternoon at 3 o'clock and tomorrow at [illegible] 30 at Hovey's.

Miss Anne Kaire, fashion co-ordinator of Hovey's, predicting a big season for cotton, planned the show so as to emphasize the economy, versatility and beauty of this fabric.

All types of vacation clothes are to be shown, from cotton bathing suits and riding habits to formal evening attire. All have been chosen, however, with a moderate budget in mind.

The background for the display is a reproduction of a magazine cover showing a wistful travel agent surrounded by travel posters. Before this setting parade girls on vacation wearing a selection of new fashions from all the ready-to-wear departments of the Summer street store.

The vacationists are bound for New England, the playground of the U. S. A., for the most part, but also for New York and [illegible] west and south so that every kind of summer [illegible] may be exhibited.

Harlow Improved by Restful Night

Beverly Hills, Calif., June 3 (INS)—Jean Harlow is much improved after a restful night, Mrs. Jean Bello, mother of the "platinum blonde" film actress, reported today.

This was the third illness for Miss Harlow since February. She returned from a personal appearance engagement in Washington and almost immediately was stricken with influenza. In April she was hospitalized for the extraction of wisdom teeth.

Production of "Saratoga" has been suspended pending her recovery.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Caused by Tired Kidneys

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, lumbago, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait. Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Labor Should Learn
ITS DEPENDENCE UPON
Capital, Enterprise

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, June 3. When a condition comes into your own [illegible] for the first time its full meaning.

For example, we have all been reading about labor unrest and strikes. We read about the CIO, and its demand for recognition as the sole bargaining representative of the laborers in various plants. But unless, perhaps, we happen to live in Detroit, or Hershey, or some other affected center, we don't really get the full significance of the thing.

* * *

Now this situation has come home to me for the first time [illegible] have a very few hundred dollars of my life's savings [illegible] a small business. I know some of those who run [illegible] and it has been a well-managed, profitable concern. Yesterday I was informed that this business is seriously [illegible] immediate dissolution.

The story, very briefly, is this: A certain labor "leader" with a strange sounding name has been "organizing" the employes of this business. He has "led" them to make the usual sort of demands—two weeks' vacation with pay, a large insurance reserve, and an increase in wages to $50 a week.

I am advised that the management holds that these demands cannot be met. And there can be no doubt about one thing, namely, that the management would rather wind up the business than to pay such wages. In their judgment, there is not [illegible] make it worth while on such terms.

* * *

[illegible] maybe some of my readers, may say that [illegible], that all the management wants is fat profits. In [illegible] particular case the labor leader has told the management [illegible] are not pushing the business as they should, and that [illegible] would expand they could make more money and pay the [illegible] wages!

[illegible] management thinks it knows the [illegible] and it does not know how to get any more profitable [illegible]. I suppose too that the idea of taking additional risks [illegible] for the sake of paying more money to their employes, does not have any very strong appeal to them!

* * *

The plain fact is the concern is about to be dissolved and to distribute its assets to those who put money into it—while there is anything left.

That means unemployment both for the capital and for the laborers.

Two thoughts are brought home to me:

1. In this case, at least, there is no way to settle the issue sensibly. In the first place, the men have the delusion that all they have to do is to organize and demand what they want (if worst comes to worst, the government will take care of them comfortably). In the second place, there is no law which the employer can resort to for the purpose of compelling a just settlement. The Wagner Act is for labor, yet strangely enough the laborers do not resort to it.

* * *

2. The labor problem in this country may be nearing a final showdown, but it certainly has not reached that point yet. More trouble lies ahead. More lessons will have to be learned in the most costly way.

The employers, it seems to me, have been learning that they can't run business on capital alone. Many of them have learned their dependence upon labor; and the importance of laborers, not only as joint producers but also as consumers and citizens.

The most immediate need now is that laborers should learn their dependence upon capital and enterprise.

If saving and investment are too much restricted or deprived of interest, they will not function. Then labor will lack plant and equipment payrolls.

If enterprise (the responsible organization and direction of business ventures) is deprived of profits to such extent that enterprisers don't find it worthwhile, they will lay down their business burdens. Then labor will lack that real leadership which runs the risks of deciding what business is worthwhile, meanwhile advancing wages to employes pending the result of the business.

Is organized labor going to force us to go through depression and lower living standards in order to learn its lesson?

N. E. SHOE OUTPUT
April Production a Record

Total shoe production in April, of 13,210,096 pairs, are reported by approximately 387 factories in the New England shoe States, was the largest output produced in any April on record, and represents the tenth consecutive month of record-breaking production levels in New England, according to analysis by the New England Shoe and Leather Association.

Massachusetts, with some 267 [illegible] shoe factories produced [illegible] pairs, a gain of 7 per cent [illegible] New Hampshire [illegible] 17 per cent [illegible] shoe production dropped [illegible] per cent in this period largely [illegible] of the strike waged by the CIO Union, the United Shoe Workers of America, against some Auburn-Lewiston shoe manufacturers.

Total production of shoes in the first four months of 1937 was 58,[illegible] pairs in the New England States, representing a gain of [illegible] per cent over the same period a year ago.

Massachusetts with an output of [illegible] pairs led all other states in production and New Hampshire with a production gain of 25 per cent for this period, showed the greatest percentage increase over 1936 for any one state. Despite the [illegible] shoe production in Maine [illegible] 18 per cent above 1936 for this period.

MAJOR
NRA Policy
CHANGES
MANY PITFALLS NOTED

Washington, June 3 (AP)—The NRA abandoned price fixing months before the Supreme Court declared the Recovery Act unconstitutional.

This policy had been criticized as tending to foster monopoly and its abandonment was hastened with the resignation of General Hugh S. Johnson, as administrator and consequent reorganization of the recovery administration under board control.

S. Clay Williams, wealthy, conservative tobacco manufacturer was first chairman of the National Industry Recovery Board set up when Johnson resigned.

Three months after Williams [illegible] prices in the [illegible] code were suspended, marking the end of NRA's price-fixing policy.

In another three months, Donald Richberg, NRA general counsel who differed with Johnson over policies replaced Williams. Richberg had only two months to press his reorganization of the recovery administration before the Supreme Court on May 27, 1935 invalidated NRA, holding it was an unconstitutional delegation of power to the President by Congress.

President Roosevelt by executive order created a "stop-gap" NRA to wind up affairs of the recovery administration, but the [illegible] was dead and with it for the time being, went government regulation of wages and hours.

Later the President appointed a committee on industrial analysis which made an exhaustive study of NRA's successes and failures.

One of its conclusions was that regulation of labor and trade practices should be separated.

"While labor and trade practice aspects of an industry program," the committee said, "are definitely related in many ways and should be coordinated, NRA experience indicates that separate administrative bodies should be provided for negotiation and for compliance activities, both in the field of labor practices on the one hand and of merchandising problems on the other."

The committee also said the great speed with which the National Recovery Administration was set up contributed to the difficulties it encountered.

"NRA attempted to cover more ground and at a greater speed than could possibly be covered effectively," the committee said, "and its whole program was colored by this fact, and by other facts closely akin to it.

"Both management and labor went too far with the result that many impractical and unenforceable provisions were put into the codes to the detriment of the more worthwhile provisions.

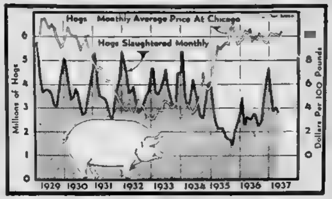
"The apparently simple conception of fixing maximum hours, minimum wages, and minimum price provisions developed wholly unexpected degrees of complexity.

"Hours needed to be flexible for a variety of reasons, and yet not so flexible as to defeat the original purpose."

"The committee found, however, that NRA's development had brought it beyond the point of fostering monopoly, if this were true earlier.

"The final NRA policy was, in spirit and intent, quite in harmony with the anti-trust laws, favoring competitive flexibility of prices and production as against control," the committee said.

Hog Prices Move Higher



Hog prices in the first half of May moved sharply higher in the Chicago market, reaching an average of $10.40 per one hundred pounds. This price was the highest since April, 1936, and the highest for any May since 1929.

Although there is now a steady supply of pork importations into the United States, the declining domestic supply is offsetting the imports as market factors, according to livestock men. It is pointed out that the number of hogs slaughtered is lowered because of the 1936 drouth effects.

Hog slaughterings, while above the comparative marketings for the last two years, are seasonally under the results of more normal periods. As this chart shows, there is a seasonal movement in the sending of pigs "to market."

WALL STREET BLUE
May Volume Near Record Low

By LESLIE GOULD
International News Service Financial Writer

New York, June 3 (INS)—The "break even" point for Wall Street—the line of demarcation between profit and loss in the operation of the brokerage business—is a 1,200,000 share day on the New York Stock Exchange.

Some firms make money at this volume, and some, naturally, lose but on the average this is the dividing line between profit and loss.

Few people know this. In fact the general assumption has been that a million and a half share day was the figure. But that is no [illegible] today.

The million 200 thousand figure has been arrived at after a careful check of leading houses, and comes from the best source possible.

FIRMS RETRENCHING

This "break even" point is unusually important at this time. For firms throughout the street are retrenching—reducing staffs, inaugurating "Scotch weeks"—one week off without pay every month, eliminating departments and branch offices, and so on. The main ones taking these steps are the big wire houses who are running the brokerage show now.

In the last month, there have been only four trading days in which stock exchange volume has equalled or exceeded the million 200 thousand share mark, and one of these just equalled that figure and two topped it by only 30 thousand shares. The fourth so-called profitable day saw a volume of 1,770,000.

So, Wall street is again in the dumps and the air around Broad and Wall streets is so blue that a visitor can hardly see the Morgan offices.

May trading comes close to being a new low record for the market since the late 1929 boom days. And there has been no improvement so far this month. Sales Tuesday—the first day of trading this month—were 750,000 shares and yesterday they shrunk to 540,000, the smallest turnover in more than two years.

The following tabulation shows the daily share volume on the big board from May 1 to date:

APRIL TURNOVER

The average daily turnover for April was one million 331 thousand shares, and this is excluding Saturdays, which are always below the "break even" point except in unusually active markets.

In March the average was better than this, being one million 541 thousand 780 shares, and in February the brokerage fraternity had a real profitable month, daily shares averaging two million 284 thousand shares. And in January, the daily average was two million 342 thousand 856 shares. Last year the daily average was one million 683 thousand 356 shares, with Saturdays being counted in.

Thus May is the first really poor month in more than a year. The trouble is that Wall Street believes that is is going to be that way this summer, particularly with the current drift toward an investment market.

If this is to become 90 per cent an investment market, then Wall Street will have to geared down. At present volume, there is not enough business to go around. There are too many houses and too many stock exchange memberships. In other words the water has not yet been squeezed out of Wall Street as it has out of the stocks and bonds it trades in.

Power Production Gains Over Past Week's Figure

New York, June 3 (AP)—Production of electricity in the United States for the week ended May 28 was 2,206,713,000 kilowatt hours the Edison Electric Institute reported today. This represented a gain of 4 of 1 per cent over the previous week's figure of 2,198,646,000 kilowatt hours and an increase of 12.9 per cent over the same period a year ago.

The advance, which was contra-seasonal, carried the Associated Press index of power production with 1929-30 taken as 100, to 119.7 equalling the high figure for the year. Last week the index, which is adjusted for seasonal and long-term trend, stood at 118.3 and a year ago at 107.9.

POSITION of Industry
STUDIED
HOW BUSINESS IS FINANCED

Chicago, June 3—Because government loans, unlike bank loans, are not subject to quick contraction in the event of a recession in business, industry today is in a far less vulnerable position than it was in the late twenties.

This statement was made by H. S. Payson Rowe, manager of the bond department of the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company this morning in an address before the 45th annual convention of that company's agents' association being held at the Edgewater Beach Hotel.

"The various indices available show that activity in certain industries is approaching 1929 levels," Rowe stated. "The steel industry, automobile industry, and particularly the consumers goods industries such as retail and chain stores are operating at a high rate. Residential construction has shown a marked gain although dollar volume of contracts signed this year is still only about one half of the 1929 level. On the other hand, public utilities are doing very little new building and the railroad purchases of materials and supplies are still far below 1929.

"A business recovery, based on a replacement demand following four years of depression should not have run its course by now and further expansion of business may be expected in spite of temporary and minor recessions.

"With business approaching pre-depression levels, it is interesting to observe by what means it is being financed. Bank credit in use is only one-half that of 1929, and new capital raised during the past few years through the sale of long-term bond issues has so far been almost negligible. The chief method of financing this material business expansion has been through the increase of government debt.

"The government has borrowed more than 22 billion dollars since 1929, and government agencies have loaned over eight and one-half billions of this money to farmers, home owners, and industry. These loans, unlike bank loans, are not subject to quick contraction in the event of a recession in business and could not cause a drastic deflationary movement such as we had a few years ago. For this reason, industry itself is in a far less vulnerable position than in the late twenties, and should be able to take care of changes in demand and supply without serious dislocation.

"On the other hand business gives no immediate indication of entering an inflationary movement. Uncertainty as to the policies of the government, increased labor costs and labor troubles, threats of higher taxes, and caution learned in the recent depression has tempered the desire for expansion. All signs point to extreme conservation in business management, and it is evident that any dislocation would be caused by factors arising outside of business itself."

Because of recent business demands Rowe contended it is evident that there should be a large increase in insurance in force at the end of the present year.

New York, June 3—Guardians of America's superior living standards should resist tendencies to upset conditions of free trade prevailing within the borders of the United States, which is the greatest free trade area in the world today.

When wedges are entered there are invariably plausible excuses for departing from the traditional policy. The recent Supreme Court decision forbidding the shipment of convict-made goods across state lines [illegible] free [illegible] in itself is a case in point.

Frederick Last long ago warned that under conditions of free trade, areas with low living standards tend to drag down those with higher levels.

NEEDS TO BE DEBATED

N. E. Trade CONDITIONS Spotty

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

A careful reading of current trade reports for the New England area creates the definite impression that conditions are decidedly spotty.

While some manufacturing lines are affected by seasonal changes the general average of activity is from 10 to 15 per cent above last year. But other important indices show declines.

Electrical production last week fell below that of the previous period, and building trades show a tendency to slow down. The woolen business continues very slow and the long period of dullness is having its effect on prices which have declined to the lowest point this year. Among the cheerful items we find in the Dun & Bradstreet report are gains in retail and wholesale volumes and a firm price situation in rayons. Cottons are doing fairly well but it is also noticeable that mills are buying comparatively little raw cotton.

* * *

The blues criers who a few weeks ago belittled the outlook for the domestic wheat crop have been driven to cover by the crop estimates of expert Chicago forecasters. The figures supplied by the experts not only point to a very satisfactory crop but also call for a yield that has only been exceeded seven times in the agricultural history of the United States. While some damage has been done the spring crop, it is still satisfactory, and together with a forecast of a winter crop almost double the output of the last six years, we continue to feel it spells excellent profits for farm equipment manufacturers, mail order houses and granger rails.

* * *

Two other objections of the glum prophets also appear ready to be discarded. First a tight world wheat supply situation should operate against price declines a big American crop might otherwise bring; second the corn outlook is also excellent. And while the latter may find its way to market via the livestock route it none-the-less spells farm prosperity.

* * *

A stock market that will not move is hardly susceptible to satisfactory analysis. And that is the case with the current market. Principal cheer can be drawn from the protracted sidewise movement of important groups since late April. The natural, and some say the logical, conclusion is that pessimism is dying down. They claim that the pattern of steady declines followed by relatively sharp recoveries has been broken. The substitution of aimless fluctuations, while unsatisfactory from a trading angle, at least lends support to theories accumulation rather than distribution is facilitated.

* * *

Another pointer that untrained observers overlook is the decline in the number of issues traded. Most people are prone to use total volume figures alone in measuring market interest. They forget that a steady contraction in traded issues definitely points to a drying up of both necessitous and fear selling.

* * *

Notebook. Certain-Teed Products has been a disappointment to many investors and traders. The reason is that the sales figures for April heard on the street make a poor comparison with the like 1936 month. It is to be remembered that a year ago the paint division contributed to gross. This year the company is trying to liquidate the division

At the same time a great deal of speculative buying took place early this year in anticipation of price increases . . . Good points include higher roofing prices and reports the company opened more new accounts in the first quarter of this year than in the entire year 1936.

FORBES Views WALL ST.

SAYS IT WILL AGAIN BOOM

By B. C. FORBES

Wall Street is popularly supposed to be worldly-wise, cynical, hard-boiled.

Wall Street, as a matter of fact often acts boyishly, not to say childishly.

It is extremely mercurial. It is either bubbling over with optimism or down in the dumps. It constantly flies to extremes.

* * *

Because dealings in stocks have been very quiet lately, New York Stock Exchange firms have been discharging employes, reducing salaries, even resorting to Scotch weeks, meaning one payless week each month.

And Wall Street is quite, quite sure that speculation never, never again will become animated.

* * *

Stock transactions on the exchange in May were the smallest for that month in many years. So were bond transactions.

But stock trading for the first five months of this year, although behind 12 months ago, was fully twice what it was in the corresponding period of 1935, as well as greater than in 1934 or 1932.

* * *

Wall Street's mental state is fairly accurately reflected by what brokers are prepared to pay for New York Stock Exchange and Curb Exchange memberships.

The latest sales were a $31,000 and $22,000, respectively.

This table tells the tale:

	Stock Exchange High	Stock Exchange Low	Curb Exchange High	Curb Exchange Low
1925	$150,000	$99,000	$37,500	$8,000
1926	175,000	133,000	35,000	17,500
1927	305,000	170,000	67,000	22,000
1928	595,000	290,000	170,000	36,000
1929	625,000	350,000	254,000	150,000
1930	480,000	205,000	225,000	70,000
1931	322,000	125,000	137,500	40,000
1932	185,000	68,000	55,000	16,500
1933	250,000	90,000	50,000	25,000
1934	190,000	70,000	40,000	17,000
1935	140,000	65,000	33,000	12,000
1936	174,000	89,000	48,000	26,000

* * *

Of course, Wall Street is entirely wrong in assuming that speculation will never again become rampant.

Admittedly, obstacles have been created. In the old days, brokers were willing to buy stocks for customers on margins as low as 10 per cent.

The Securities & Exchange Commission has stopped that practice. It has decreed that traders must furnish no less than 55 per cent of the purchase price of stocks.

Wall Street is harrowed by intimations that the SEC contemplates making it mandatory for customers to pay 100 per cent. In its present pessimistic mood, Wall Street gives credence to such rumors. Why any such ruling should be resorted to is beyond comprehension. Throughout the whole realm of business today it is customary to extend credit for all purchases running into sizable sums.

* * *

Judging by past experience speculation will again become feverish within the measurable future.

It can be safely predicted that more activity will be witnessed on stock exchanges than even during the boom.

Whether exchange seats will again command better than $600,000 during the present generation is doubtful, because of the increased cost of doing business and the curtailed opportunities for making big money by charging margin customers interest rates several times those paid by brokers for bank loans.

Even so this writer hesitates to put any limit on what may be achieved in any phase of business, industrial, financial activity during coming years.

* * *

Suppose the New Deal were to be terminated in 1940 and suppose an administration acceptable to men of affairs were to come into power, the probabilities are that the 1940's would bring developments exceeding anything ever before recorded in America's history.

Superior Steel Business Holds

Business for Superior Steel has been holding up remarkably well according to Frank R. Frost president.

Reporting earnings this year have been running at a high rate Mr. Frost indicated second quarter results would be substantial. The company, he said, is getting some business as a result of the strikes in other steel plants.

Rand April Net Peak for Month

April net earnings of Remington Rand, Inc., were the largest for that month in the history of the company being about $555,000, James H. Rand Jr., president, announced.

This compared with the previous peak April, in 1929, when net was $513,000. Net income in April last year was $237,000.

Lower STOCK PRICES Prevail

New York, June 3—Stocks slipped as much as a point today then settled into an extremely narrow range slightly above the day's lows.

Selling was concentrated chiefly in the steels, rails and coppers with motors, aviations, utilities and sugar shares also generally soft. Amusements, rubbers and farm implements displayed independent firmness.

U. S. Steel, Bethlehem and Republic each dropped a point or more but recovered small fractions later. Similar performances were turned in by American Smelting, Anaconda and International Nickel in coppers and Atchison, Baltimore & Ohio and Southern Pacific in rails.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST

The Unpaid Debt and Our "Isolation"

ON FRIDAY, May 28, the United States dropped reminders into the mail-pouches of many European countries that on June 15 next $205,338,754 was due on a debt that is now riding fast toward the $13,000,000,000 point.

The Treasury Department expects, and will undoubtedly receive, the same stereotyped regrets from all the countries notified except Finland.

Great Britain's excuse this time will be that as she is spending $7,500,000,000 to rearm for the next war, she must be excused for not paying us for staking her to the last war.

As the English unpaid debt to us is something around $5,000,000,000, the American people may be interested to know that it is PAYING out of its own pockets FOR ENGLISH AIRPLANES, BATTLESHIPS AND SUBMARINES.

France, with her usual politesse, will express regret also, and may even inform us with the customary Gallic shoulder-shrug that she is using the $4,000,000,000 she owes us for guns and an international exposition.

There are ten other nations that have also prepared their alibis even before they get the "reminders" from Uncle Sam.

Experts in the Treasury Department now believe there will be a further four-year postponement of debt discussions.

AND yet, in spite of all these facts, Europe has the impudence to accuse us of "ISOLATION"!

Isolation! We have sent Europe our men, our food, our money, our Young Plan, our Dawes Plan, our relief commissions.

We have been so "good neighborly" that we are importing, under preferential tariff agreements, nearly all their products, while our own exports are traveling toward the vanishing point.

What the European debt-welchers mean by our "isolation" is our refusal to become practically a European nation.

And that is the reason why she is engaged in trying to break down the JOHNSON LAW SEA-WALL—the law that prohibits the sale in America of the bonds and securities of any debt-defaulting nation.

Rose-Colored Portholes

TOMORROW'S Merchant Marine will probably keep its portholes. But it will have rose-colored glasses, too. And American youth will look through them.

That is the assurance of Joseph A. Conry, the new Maritime Commission's special counsel.

There has been too much porthole gazing in the Merchant Marine, he tells us. There must be more "I'm Seeing the World Through Rose-Colored Glasses."

Consequently, he and his able superior, Joseph P. Kennedy, plan to offer attractive inducements to American youth to join up, to learn the trade of seaman in its many branches, and to expect good wages and reasonable promotions.

That is the kind of program that promises prosperity for the Merchant Marine. We can't have it too soon. If we must have portholes, let them be rose-colored.

More Beaches Needed

SUMMER near, hot days sending thousands to beaches, Metropolitan Boston's lack of adequate bathing facilities is once more evident.

Though six of the State-owned shore reservations are within ready reach of Boston, they cannot begin to accommodate the million and more people that pack them on days like last Tuesday.

This congestion was seen and deplored by the Planning Board in its recent recommendations to the Legislature. The acquisition by the State of six additional beaches was urged. But the legislators chose to do nothing.

The Planning Board should submit its recommendations again next year. Beaches, affording good air, sunshine and relief from heat, are necessary. They are health insurance. And there could be no better investment of public money.

Needham Closes School

BECAUSE defects were reported in the walls of the Needham Junior High building, the School Committee suspended classes and dismissed more than 300 students.

That was the proper thing to do. Town and school officials cannot afford to take chances with children's lives.

Still fresh in the public mind is the New London, Tex., tragedy, in which more than 500 girls and boys died.

This, as everyone knows, might have been averted had the danger been recognized and the school closed in time.

If the good example set by the Needham authorities is followed in other cities and towns where buildings appear faulty, there will be fewer disasters and a great saving of life.

It is better to act than to wish one had acted.

Keep "Quacks" In Ponds

IF Massachusetts must have "quacks," the public will hear them in duck ponds, not find them in the medical profession.

That is the decision and determination of the 156th annual meeting of the State Medical Society, now in session in Boston.

The doctors are right. We have only one life, never too long at most. And none of us can afford to trust it to charlatans and fakers, however good their intentions.

When a thinking man wants the plumbing in his home repaired, he summons a plumber. He doesn't call a lawyer, a carpenter or a bricklayer.

There is no reason why he should be less careful with his one life.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

My reverence for ancient adages is at no time abundant. But no truism rouses my ire as quickly and copiously as that venerable saw—"HE WHO MAKES HIS BED MUST LIE IN IT."

Elsie Robinson

I'm willing to wager that no proverb has been responsible for as much discouragement, despair, abject surrender and unnecessary tragedy as this miserable mouthing. And if the Devil passes out medals for vice-promoting proverbs, he should give the Sourpuss who invented this one the prize collection.

"Lie in the bed you make"—WHY?

In the first place, as a "bedmaker" of general foolishness, man's a natural. There never was a human being with the spunk of a soft shell crab who didn't go through life making one bed after another. The thing's inevitable.

And the more energy, audacity, curiosity and general rambunctiousness a mortal possesses, the more beds he is bound to make in his headlong recklessness.

In fact, the only human who can escape making beds is some softie with the courage of a cupcustard, and the initiative of a barnacle.

A COWARDLY PLAN

All this, of course, does not excuse that vast array of reprehensible acts grouped under the label "bed." Nor am I, in any way, suggesting that humanity's natural virility be used as a blanket excuse for all misdoing.

But I doubt if there could be any misdeed as foul as the course of conduct which this old adage suggests . . . namely, to lie down and take the count after you've made a mistake.

For that's exactly what most "remorse" amounts to. Instead of snapping out of it and turning our energies to better account we are advised to abandon ourselves to a lifetime of boo-hoo! Than which I can imagine no program more thoroughly contemptible.

A I see it, we were given our lives to use. That we will inevitably misuse them here and there, now and then, is as certain as roses in June and frosts in December. For man is not only weak, but he is also plenty dumb. He will not only commit those things which he should not have done, but he will also make many a mistake for which he is not prepared and does not in the least expect.

But suppose he does? The great thing in living is LIFE. To move on and keep the traffic going, even if we have had a "blowout." And the gallant saints are not those who have never slipped . . . but those who have had the gumption to keep hustling after they had.

So you might as well know, right here and now, REGARDLESS OF HOW MANY "BEDS" I MAKE, I FIRMLY REFUSE TO LIE IN THEM!

I honestly regret those I have already made. I earnestly wish I might say that I would never make any more—but I know myself far too well for any such fond delusions.

So I might as well face the fact, with such fortitude as I possess, that I'll probably go on making an idiot of myself, every so often, until the end.

FORGET MISTAKES

But I shall never lie down and resign myself to the fact. After one decent profession of regret . . . after one honest effort to make amends . . . I SHALL IMMEDIATELY FORGET IT AS FAST AS POSSIBLE, AND DO MY BEST TO GET ALONG ON FRESH AND, I HOPE, MORE MERITORIOUS ADVENTURES.

This, to me, seems the only civilized or Christian code of conduct . . . the only way by which one may show a healthy appreciation of the priceless gift of existence. As for dedicating myself to a lifelong wallow—NOTHING DOING!

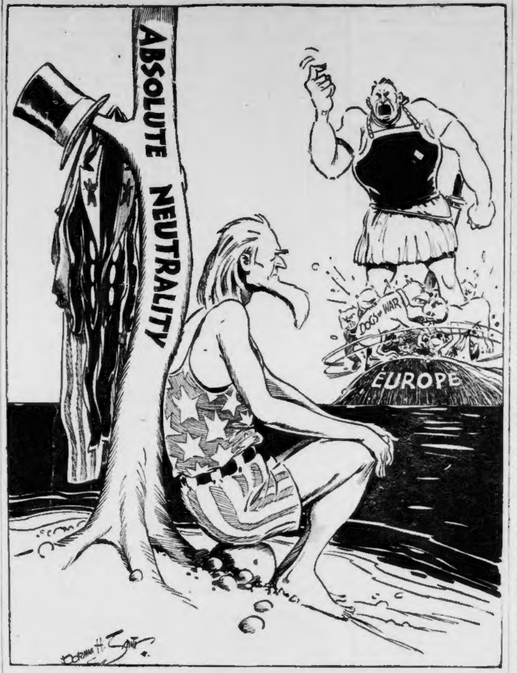
"Life is real

"And Life is earnest—"

And if I can't do anything better with it than perpetually snivel over my errors, I certainly deserve a harsh rebuke.

"And Don't Go Near the Water!"

Copyright, 1937, by American Newspapers, Inc.



The dog fight in Spain is getting so hot Europe is beginning to look around for HELP.

But Uncle Sam has hung his clothes on the hickory limb of ABSOLUTE NEUTRALITY and will not go near the water.

The last European dog fight he got into was ENOUGH.

Whatever happens in Europe now is EUROPE'S business, as far as America is concerned.

We are going to stay home and mind OUR business.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, June 3—The illustrator E. Simms Campbell is the only Negro to receive recognition in top ranking magazines. Such as Cosmopolitan, Esquire and the rest. His flair is for the pretty debutante against the drawing room background. He uses models of his own race for white delineations.

A very serious-minded young man, he occupies a studio and home in The Dunbar, an apartment house built for his race in Harlem. His wife is his constant companion and often poses for him. Much of his ability to paint and draw comes naturally although he has studied prodigiously.

Just now he is anxious to lay aside enough to study awhile in Paris and Florence. His first commercialized efforts were drawings he sent out by mail as he feared his color might be a hindrance. But he found no such attitude exists among art editors.

He is now receiving the same pay for his work as ranking artists. Many colored folks have shown a talent for the drawing board that was never marketed. Bert Williams was a deft caricaturist and the late Florence Mills did some creditable water colors.

No one ever rose more spectacularly in Wall Street than Jessie L. Livermore in the skyrocketing days when he was known as "the fair haired boy of the markets," and from which dizzy whirl he plucked fabulous fortunes. He was a head-turner in the cafes and at big sporting events. One of the outstanding celebrities.

Then came his reverses, losing a fortune today and regaining it tomorrow until the final crack-up. Then he dropped out of sight. But he's in circulation again. Now and then he is seen on the avenue going to a building where he maintains offices.

He sends out for his lunches and is no longer on view at first nights or other spots where he was so long a personage.

Bill Robinson, the deservedly popular Bojangles of Harlem, can neither read nor write. When he appears as a guest star on the radio the studio warns script writers not to change his dialogue or cues because he has already memorized them from the script reading. He has an uncanny memory and after lines are read to him twice he never forgets.

While he is not sensitive to friends knowing of the educational lack for which he was not to blame, he doesn't care to have the studio audiences know, and always appears before the microphone with script in hand.

His mentor is Jesse Owens, the sprinter, whom he admires greatly because of his college education. Owens reads and rehearses the stuff with him.

I lived at an uptown hotel where Shoeless Joe Jackson of the Chicago ball team put up when in New York. He could not read nor write, but had been taught a scrawl that could be deciphered as his signature for registering. In the dining room he ate with a fellow player who knew of his deficiency, but Jackson always studied the menu carefully as his friend wrote out their orders.

Thingumbobs: The Arthur Samuels are motoring in France this summer . . . Irving Hoffman with whiskers would be a ringer for Joseph Pulitzer as a young man . . . Hannen Swaffer, fiery London critic, has written a play with a spiritualistic theme . . . Jed Kiley who started the night club vogue in Paris has visited only two night clubs in America . . . Andre Maurois thinks no food is so inspirational to writing folk as hot onion soup . . . Jim Tully is writing a book of hobo verses . . . Grover Whalen was selected by a London tabloid as New York's best dressed Coronation visitor.

Speaking of illiteracy, Kin Hubbard's pet story concerned the illiterate in an Ohio town who ran a drug store speakeasy. One of those places with a window full of empty corn salve boxes and nothing behind the prescription case save a barrel of whiskey. Every morning the proprietor would sit out front as the town went to work, professing to read the Cincinnati Enquirer.

One morning as he held the paper upside down upon which was the picture of a battleship just launched, a passerby called: "What's the news today Uncle Billy?"

It was during the Spanish American war and, holding up the upside down newspaper, he replied: "Those Spanish scoundrels have sunk another battleship!"

John D.'s Achievements

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

Rene Descartes, the eighteenth century French philosopher, thought the pineal gland, on top of the head, was the seat of the soul. Ancient Oriental mystics toyed with the same idea.

Edwin C. Hill

Curiously, the idol's eye of the Hindus marks the location of the pineal gland. In some lower forms of vertebrates it has somewhat the structure of an eye, and has been called the "pineal eye."

Young John D. Rockefeller, teaching his Sunday class at Cleveland, doubtless had no such conception of the seat of the soul. But, just a few days before his death, it was disclosed that in the last year of his life, the Rockefeller Foundation had spent $900,000 in the study of the pineal gland and other glands. And, with all deference to scientific precision, it may be said that they, too, seek the "seat of the soul."

Raymond B. Fosdick, President of the Foundation, refers in his annual report to the effort "to describe an emotion in terms of chemical reaction, or prescribe a hormone for a mental state."

Endrocrinology, the study of the ductless glands, has been an absorbing interest of the Foundation since 1929. In that year they began concentrating on mental hygiene, subsequently spending about $64,000,000 in this research, through grants to medical schools. And mental hygiene today means chiefly glands. And, here, if anywhere in the domain of materialistic science, lies the seat of the soul.

DID VAST GOOD

Rockefeller, the $12-a week clerk, had a vaulting ambition to accumulate $100,000. He gathered more than a billion and gave away $750,000,000. One thinks of the young man's bewilderment if some voice of prophecy had whispered that one day he would spend $64,000,000 for knowledge of some curious little pellets in the human body which made a balanced orchestration of emotion, thought and will.

The building of the Rockefeller fortune, in the context of America's great industrial era, has been widely studied and appraised, and there will be a long journalistic epilogue to his amazing career.

More difficult to weigh or appraise are the gleanings of scientific knowledge made possible by his millions. The world which these surplus millions have explored is more profoundly changed than the world of machines and energies which nurtured, rewarded and, in turn, profited by his financial genius.

The young Rockefeller could have comprehended the latter vision, but probably neither he nor any other man of his age could have even vaguely glimpsed the labyrinth of scientific wonders to which his gold was to be the sesame. Foundation scientists, Daniel Boones of the submicroscopic wilderness, study chlorophyll, the green coloring matter of plants.

Here is the "light trap," the point of transition from inanimate to animate matter, from the inorganic to the organic. Here, perhaps, is the portal of life, the gateway to the ultimate secret.

The planetary outreach of the Rockefeller fortune ranges inward to the infinitesimal. Rockefeller biochemists study the genes. Here is a door unlocked late in the days of the 97-year-old John D. Rockefeller. In the life cell is the chromosome, which is a bagful of genes. The genes are like the colored balls on a Chinese abacus, which your Chinese laundryman slips up and down to add up your bill.

CONTROLS HEREDITY

Their arrangement determines the color of your hair and eyes, your mental, physical and emotional heritage from this parent or that, or both of them, or shadowy ancestors far back in the dim pathways of heredity.

"The cargo of heredity," Mr. Fosdicks call them in his report, "carrying, compacted in their minuteness, the whole load of inheritance from one generation to the next."

The Foundation studies the hormones, secretions of the ductless glands which rule the chemistration of the body and, in the light of recent research, the mind. They are beginning to produce them synthetically, along with the enzymes, equally mysterious and potent instruments of the life chemistry. The Foundation gives grants and stimulates research among many, many universities and research institutions.

Among them are Johns Hopkins University; The Institute of Child Welfare of the University of California; the Institute for Psychoanalysis in Chicago; the Institute of Human Genetics at the University of Copenhagen; the National Committee for Mental Hygiene; Galton Laboratory; University of London; Maudsley Hospital, London; College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University; Worcester State Hospital Massachusetts; the University of Amsterdam, and the University of Leyden, Netherlands.

Merchant princes of the Byzantine empire and the Italian city-states left marmoreal splendors to acclaim and perpetuate their fame, and, incidentally, released the great art upsurge of the Renaissance. The great Elizabethan magnificos gave a tremendous but incidental stimulus to learning and the arts, as did the resplendent Indian rajahsk, but the modern industrial age marks the first diversion for the secrets of widespread human well-being. And the world outreach of the Rockefeller Foundation is the apex of this endeavour.

On the Nail

And so they were married and lived happily ever after.

Thus concluded the love-stories in the days when life was simpler and less sophisticated.

Today the king who gave up a throne for a "commoner" will also give up his bachelorhood and become the husband of Mrs. Wallis Warfield, of Baltimore, U. S. A.

The worst cynic cannot deny that here is a love-match pure and simple, a love as devotional and passionate as that of Paolo and Francesca or Abelard and Heloise.

And excepting for a small set of political tinkerers and social snobs in England, there is no one in the whole world today who will not say "GOOD-LUCK! BON VOYAGE!" to the Duke and Duchess of Windsor.

Kipling, Wells, Shaw and Arnold Bennett made writing pay. So did Dumas, Victor Hugo and Dickens.

But very often famous songs do not pay the writers of them. There was Septimus Winner, for instance, who wrote "Listen to the Mocking Bird," "Oh Where! Oh Where! Is My Little Dog Gone?" and "What Is Home Without a Mother?"

Winner sold his copyright in 1855 on "Listen to the Mocking Bird" for FIVE DOLLARS. The purchasers found it a mint and sold more than 20,000,000 copies. King Edward the Seventh and Abraham Lincoln used to whistle it.

On the one hundredth and tenth anniversary of Winner's birth in Philadelphia recently, Charles E. Claghorn published a book called "The Mocking Bird" which tells all about this man who thrilled the whole world for nearly a century—for $5!

Bermuda is now only five hours away—by plane. These islands are probably the "still vex'd Bermoothes" of Shakespeare, where he laid the scene of his magical play, "The Tempest."

As a matter of fact, Bermuda was discovered during a tempest. Juan Bermudez, a Spaniard on his way from Cuba to Spain, was wrecked there early in the sixteenth century. England took possession of the islands in 1650. It was a year afterward that Shakespeare began to write "The Tempest."

In these beautiful islands—never troubled by a war—one can well imagine Prospero, the magician, working his wonders. But there was one wonder the mighty Prospero could not conjure with his mantle and wand—A TRIP BY AIR FROM BERMUDA TO NEW YORK IN FIVE HOURS!

Speaking of magic—

Fish from the skies—

A consular report to the Cuban state department reports that on El Pantano Plateau, in Honduras, sardines fell during a downpour of rain. Two years ago a similar celestial fish-fry descended on Central Mexico.

The late Charles Fort, of New York City, spent a lifetime collecting from authentic records in scientific journals and newspapers that went back for more than a hundred years descriptions of the most astounding aerial phenomena.

These journals describe rains of blood, fish, rock, unclassifiable bugs and even implements of war that are not known on our planet.

Fort's theory was that all these things descended from invisible worlds all around us. He contended that some day we would break through into these other dimensions, and be able, as he said, to walk to the moon—if you care for such a long and chilly walk.

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

Another literary masterpiece has been produced by the Department of Agriculture. It is BS—92, otherwise known as "The American Chameleon and Its Care." Give it time, and it may be acclaimed as great an achievement in scientific research and the equal in popular appeal of that other classic entitled "The Love Life of a Frog."

Departmental experts prepared and published "The American Chameleon and Its Care" to answer the multitude of questions asked by thousands and thousands of people who have purchased chameleons from circuses, carnivals, etc.

Popularly known as a small reptile which always changes its color to match its surroundings, the chameleon, government research has disclosed, only changes color when it is angry or sleepy or dead.

With this knowledge available, there is no excuse for anybody getting stung in the future in the purchase of a chameleon.

A valuable and informative sequel to "The American Chameleon and Its Care" could be written on "The Political Chameleon." Compared with the political chameleon, his reptilian cousin is a rank amateur at changing color.

When you buy a chameleon at a circus you may be taking quite a gamble but it isn't anything compared with the uncertainty you face when you go to the polls to elect officials to public office.

You may know what a candidate has PROMISED to do, but that is no assurance of what he will do if he is elected.

In the judgment of United States Senator Byrd of Virginia, a dyed-in-the-wool Democrat, "THERE EXISTS AT WASHINGTON THE MOST WASTEFUL AND BUREAUCRATIC FORM OF GOVERNMENT THAT HAS EVER BEEN KNOWN IN OUR HISTORY." That is what he told the student body of the University of Richmond. It is all the more serious because there is no partisan motive behind it.

Senator Byrd's denunciation of governmental waste and bureaucracy is not based on snap judgment. As chairman of the Senate Committee on Governmental Reorganization, he has been investigating the conditions of which he speaks for several months. It is plain that he knows what he is talking about.

President Roosevelt has indicated that he also is convinced governmental expenses CAN be cut. And even Postmaster General Farley has declared the budget can be balanced by 1938 and "we must cut down on spending."

One thing which puzzles taxpayers is this: "With so much unanimity in Washington on the proposition that expenses can be reduced and must be reduced, WHY AREN'T THEY REDUCED?"

The answer seems to be that almost everybody wants someone else to bear the brunt of the cutting.

It is a lucky thing for Senator Byrd that he holds office in the United States instead of in Germany. Any German official who dared criticize the Nazi government wouldn't be an official very long. He would be lucky to keep his head.

The principal of a boys' school in East Prussia who criticized the government at a religious meeting has been exiled from Prussia and has been forbidden to ever make another public address in Germany. Freedom of speech is not tolerated under Fascist rule.

During an aerial attack on Valencia, temporary capital of Spain, the building in which the American Embassy is located was damaged by bombs and the American consul had a narrow escape from injury when he was caught in a rain of debris.

Why in the world do we maintain an embassy and keep official representatives in Spain while that country is in the throes of civil war?

'DIZZY' DEAN WINS, BAN LIFTED

HIGH COURT'S DELAY HIT BY ROOSEVELT

By GEORGE DURNO

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, June 4—Again emphasizing his determination to press for a showdown on court reorganization at this session of Congress, President Roosevelt today criticized the Supreme Court for taking a four months' summer recess without having handed down important decisions in the TVA, PWA and SEC cases.

The President pointed out that the court could, if it desired, sit in the summer for a special term.

The public is most anxious, he said, for decisions in the cases still pending, but it now appears a delay of anywhere from six months to more than a year is in prospect.

Discussing the situation generally at his press conference, Mr. Roosevelt declined to be drawn into a discussion of compromises or amendments. He said he was looking at the forest, not the trees.

READS STATUTE

The high court's failure to pass on six cases before recessing, the President said, means they must be re-argued next fall. The President read the statute governing sessions of the Supreme Court. It states the court shall hold one term annually running from October to June "unless circumstances warrant otherwise."

The President further criticized

B's Claim English From Detroit Club

Detroit, June 4—Gilbert English, rookie infielder of the Tigers, was claimed by the Boston Bees on waivers today, it was announced by Detroit officials. English, a right-handed batter and fielder, is 28 years old and batted .335 for Toledo last year.

It is expected that Gil will be used to plug the infield gap in the Boston team.

Roosevelt Says '37 Plans Complete

Washington, June 4 (INS)—President Roosevelt offered what he called a "real piece of news" to Congress at his press conference today.

He said he had no more messages or legislative proposals in preparation and that the Administration's program for the year was complete.

Still Ired, Plans Landis Appeal

New York, June 4 (AP)—Despite Dizzy Dean's continued refusal today formally to sign any statement backing up his verbal denials of alleged controversial statements, the suspension of the Cardinal pitching ace was ordered lifted by Ford Frick, president of the National League, effective within 24 hours.

Frick announced lifting of the ban, under which he put Dean two days ago as an outgrowth of purported attacks by the pitcher on the league's chief executive and Umpire George Barr, after a chaotic conference at league headquarters.

DIZ WALKS OUT, RETURNS

Dean walked out of the meeting in a rage, at one time, declaring he was "all washed up," then was persuaded to return for another compromise attempt at settlement of the dispute.

This consisted of a question and answer parley between Frick and Dean, with the pitcher flatly denying he made the critical statements

Girl 'Looper' and Two Plunge 40 Ft., Unhurt

(Picture on Page 2)

By a freak of fate, two youths and a girl, all residents of Charlestown, escaped death today when they took a 40-foot plunge in a stolen automobile off Prison Point bridge.

The speeding car ripped out a 35-foot section of the bridge rail before it hurtled down to the railroad tracks and, landing sidewise, was wrecked. A gas light pole beside the track was snapped at its base.

Police, notified of the accident by a guard at state prison, arrived in the railroad yard in time to take into custody a girl who gave the name of Miss Alice Bushid, 25, of Cottage street, and a youth who said he was Joseph Breen, 21, of Green street, both Charlestown.

GIRL DAZED AND BRUISED

The girl was dazed, bruised and scratched, but otherwise unhurt, police said, while Breen appeared to have been uninjured.

A short time later, William Sullivan, 19, of Washington street, Charlestown, was arrested as the alleged driver of the car which had been stolen from John P. Frizell of Warren street, Charlestown.

In Charlestown court, Sullivan pleaded guilty to larceny of an automobile, using an automobile without authority, operating without a license and leaving the scene of an accident. He pleaded not guilty to operating as to endanger.

UNDER SUSPENDED SENTENCE

The girl was charged with drunkenness, but the case was filed when a Malden probation officer told the court Miss Bushid had received a suspended sentence to Sherborn reformatory. The girl was surrendered to Malden.

Breen, charged with larceny of an automobile and using an automobile without authority, pleaded not guilty. He and Sullivan were held in $500 each for trial June 11.

DUKE, WALLY CHEERED IN VENICE

Venice, Italy, June 4 (AP)—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor rode down the Grand Canal of this Italian honeymoon "Niagara" today to the cheers of romantic Venetians.

The Windsors, speeding by train from their Chateau de Cande wedding to the "haunted" Austrian honeymoon castle of Wasserleonburg, near Noetsch, alighted from their special car and entered a motor launch.

They took the "between trains" excursion as guests of British Consul Allen Napier, who met them. They had three hours until the next train for Austria.

IN HIS SHIRTSLEEVES

The duke seemed comfortably domesticated. When the train pulled in, he could be seen in the window—in blue and white striped shirtsleeves.

He put on a brown coat and straw hat before he alighted with the new duchess, who had added a small white straw hat to her blue traveling ensemble.

Edward waved the hat to a throng of applauding folk, most of them women, who had gathered at the station. The duchess waved her hand.

"Vivas" and fluttering handkerchiefs came from the people on the bank of the beautiful canal.

Earlier on the train they had their first honeymoon breakfast—which consisted of Chinese tea, toast, rolls and butter, jam and lemon.

At Milan, a throng of tourists—mostly American women with a scattering of English travelers—shouted a refrain of "Wally! Wally!" until Edward went to the window, waved, and then called his bride to his side.

POLICE LINE TRACKS

They arrived at Milan at noon and continued on the route for Wasserleonburg Castle.

Customs officers in green uniforms and plumed hats swarmed aboard the train at Domodossola, Italian border station.

Military police lined the track. Attendants handed the customs officers the diplomatic passes for seven members of the Windsor en-

Mrs. R. W. Baker Wins Divorce

Mrs. Marie Bouzane Baker of Gregory street, Dorchester was awarded an uncontested divorce from Roger W. Baker by Judge Frederick J. Dillon in Suffolk Probate Court today.

Talking with reporters later, she said he was the son of Roger Baker, once operator of chain restaurants and baseball clubs, now serving a prison term for larceny.

She testified that she found out before the honeymoon was over that she should not have married him and that she left him after three months. They were married in January, 1934. She was given permission to resume her maiden name.

40 IN STATE POLICE SHIFTED BY KIRK

Within two hours of Public Safety Commissioner Kirk's orders for the most drastic shakeup in state police history today, Police Commissioner Timilty announced appointment of 26 new patrolmen to the Boston Police Department (Page 9)

In the biggest shakeup in the history of the State Police, 40 men were transferred today by Public Safety Commissioner Paul G. Kirk.

Thirty of those transferred are troopers and the rest are sergeants and lieutenants.

The entire personnel of the Lunenburg sub-station, where, according to Commissioner Kirk, the men had free ice cream from a roadside stand where a slot machine was operated, was cleaned out, the men being shifted to other parts of the state.

Several promotions were also made by Commissioner Kirk and a new position of inspector of troops was created.

Today's changes follow Kirk's report to Governor Hurley of alleged grafting in the department, the resignation of a lieutenant and corporal and suspension of a trooper.

That a drastic shakeup was to be made was revealed in the Boston Evening American exclusively earlier this week.

Lieutenant William V. Shimkus, commanding officer of Troop B, Northampton, was made the first inspector of troops for the entire department.

MILITARY INSPECTIONS

He will be required to make regular inspections of all the troops, in military fashion, and at times will be accompanied by Lieutenant Edward J. Gully, department adjutant; Captain James P. Mahoney, executive officer, or Commissioner Kirk.

The inspection of troops will be a rotating system whereby the troop commanders will, from time to time, take turns inspecting the personnel, stations and sub-stations, the commissioner announced.

Sergeant George H. Thompson of Medford, was made a lieutenant and given command of Troop D, West Bridgewater. He has been at general headquarters.

First Sergeant John P. Sullivan,

The Unpaid Debt and Our "Isolation"

ON FRIDAY, May 28, the United States dropped reminders into the mail-pouches of many European countries that on June 15 next $205,338,754 was due on a debt that is now riding fast toward the $13,000,000,000 point.

The Treasury Department expects, and will undoubtedly receive, the same stereotyped regrets from all the countries notified except Finland.

Great Britan's excuse this time will be that as she is spending $7,500,000,000 to rearm for the next war, she must be excused for not paying us for staking her to the last war.

As the English unpaid debt to us is something around $5,000,000,000, the American people may be interested to know that it is PAYING out of its own pockets FOR ENGLISH AIRPLANES, BATTLESHIPS AND SUBMARINES.

France, with her usual politesse, will express regret also, and may even inform us with the customary Gallic shoulder-shrug that she is using the $4,000,000,000 she owes us for guns and an international exposition.

There are ten other nations that have also prepared their alibis even before they get the "reminders" from Uncle Sam.

Experts in the Treasury Department now believe there will be a further four-year postponement of debt discussions.

AND yet, in spite of all these facts, Europe has the impudence to accuse us of "ISOLATION"!

Isolation! We have sent Europe our men, our food, our money, our Young Plan, our Dawes Plan, our relief commissions.

We have been so "good neighborly" that we are importing, under preferential tariff agreements, nearly all their products, while our own exports are traveling toward the vanishing point.

What the European debt-welchers mean by our "isolation" is our refusal to become practically a European nation.

And that is the reason why she is engaged in trying to break down the JOHNSON LAW SEA-WALL—the law that prohibits the sale in America of the bonds and securities of any debt-defaulting nation.

Rose-Colored Portholes

TOMORROW'S Merchant Marine will probably keep its portholes. But it will have rose-colored glasses, too. And American youth will look through them.

That is the assurance of Joseph A. Conry, the new Maritime Commission's special counsel.

There has been too much porthole gazing in the Merchant Marine, he tells us. There must be more "I'm Seeing the World Through Rose-Colored Glasses."

Consequently, he and his able superior, Joseph P. Kennedy, plan to offer attractive inducements to American youth to join up, to learn the trade of seaman in its many branches, and to expect good wages and reasonable promotions.

That is the kind of program that promises prosperity for the Merchant Marine. We can't have it too soon. If we must have portholes, let them be rose-colored.

More Beaches Needed

SUMMER near, hot days sending thousands to beaches, Metropolitan Boston's lack of adequate bathing facilities is once more evident.

Though six of the State-owned shore reservations are within ready reach of Boston, they cannot begin to accommodate the million and more people that pack them on days like last Tuesday.

This congestion was seen and deplored by the Planning Board in its recent recommendations to the Legislature. The acquisition by the State of six additional beaches was urged. But the legislators chose to do nothing.

The Planning Board should submit its recommendations again next year. Beaches, affording good air, sunshine and relief from heat, are necessary. They are health insurance. And there could be no better investment of public money.

Needham Closes School

BECAUSE defects were reported in the walls of the Needham Junior High building, the School Committee suspended classes and dismissed more than 300 students.

That was the proper thing to do. Town and school officials cannot afford to take chances with children's lives.

Still fresh in the public mind is the New London, Tex., tragedy, in which more than 500 girls and boys died.

This, as, everyone knows, might have been averted had the danger been recognized and the school closed in time.

If the good example set by the Needham authorities is followed in other cities and towns where buildings appear faulty, there will be fewer disasters and a great saving of life.

It is better to act than to wish one had acted.

Keep "Quacks" In Ponds

IF Massachusetts must have "quacks," the public will bear them in duck ponds, not find them in the medical profession.

That is the decision and determination of the 156th annual meeting of the State Medical Society, now in session in Boston.

The doctors are right. We have only one life, never too long at most. And none of us can afford to trust it to charlatans and fakers, however good their intentions.

When a thinking man wants the plumbing in his home repaired, he summons a plumber. He doesn't call a lawyer, a carpenter or a bricklayer.

There is no reason why he should be less careful with his one life.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

My reverence for ancient adages is at no time abundant. But no truism rouses my ire as quickly and copiously as that venerable saw—"HE WHO MAKES HIS BED MUST LIE IN IT."

Elsie Robinson

I'm willing to wager that no proverb has been responsible for as much discouragement, despair, abject surrender and unnecessary tragedy as this miserable mouthing. And if the Devil passes out medals for vice-promoting proverbs, he should give the Sourpuss who invented this one the prize collection.

"Lie in the bed you make"—WHY?

In the first place, as a "bed-maker" of general foolishness, man's a natural. There never was a human being with the spunk of a soft shell crab who didn't go through life making one bed after another. The thing's inevitable.

And the more energy, audacity, curiosity and general rambunctiousness a mortal possesses, the more beds he is bound to make in his headlong recklessness.

In fact, the only human who can escape making beds is some softie with the courage of a cup-custard, and the initiative of a barnacle.

A COWARDLY PLAN

All this, of course, does not excuse that vast array of reprehensible acts grouped under the label "bed." Nor am I, in any way, suggesting that humanity's natural virility be used as a blanket excuse for all misdoing.

But I doubt it there could be any misdeed as foul as the course of conduct which this old adage suggests . . . namely, to lie down and take the count after you've made a mistake.

For that's exactly what most "remorse" amounts to. Instead of snapping out of it and turning our energies to better account we are advised to abandon ourselves to a lifetime of boo-hoo! Than which I can imagine no program more thoroughly contemptible.

A I see it, we were given our lives to use. That we will inevitably misuse them here and there, now and then, is as certain as roses in June and frosts in December. For man is not only weak, but he is also plenty dumb. He will not only commit those things which he should not have done, but he will also make many a mistake for which he is not prepared and does not in the least expect.

But suppose he does? The great thing in living is LIFE. To move on and keep the traffic going, even if we have had a "blow-out." And the gallant saints are not those who have never slipped . . . but those who have had the gumption to keep hustling after they had.

So you might as well know, right here and now, REGARDLESS OF HOW MANY "BEDS" I MAKE, I FIRMLY REFUSE TO LIE IN THEM!

I honestly regret those I have already made. I earnestly wish I might say that I would never make any more—but I know myself far too well for any such fond delusions.

So I might as well face the fact, with such fortitude as I possesss, that I'll probably go on making an idiot of myself, every so often, until the end.

FORGET MISTAKES

But I shall never lie down and resign myself to the fact. After one decent profession of regret . . . after one honest effort to make amends . . . I SHALL IMMEDIATELY FORGET IT AS FAST AS POSSIBLE, AND DO MY BEST TO GET ALONG ON FRESH AND, I HOPE, MORE MERITORIOUS ADVENTURES.

This, to me, seems the only civilized or Christian code of conduct . . . the only way by which one may show a healthy appreciation of the priceless gift of existence. As for dedicating myself to a lifelong wallow—NOTHING DOING!

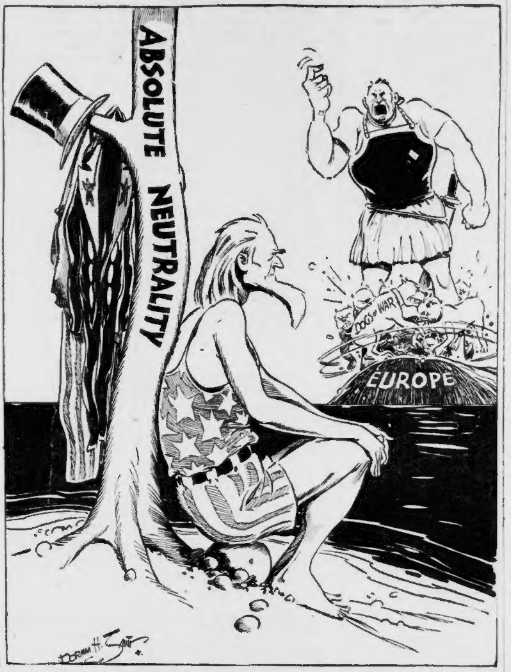
"Life is real

"And Life is earnest—"

And if I can't do anything better with it than perpetually snivel over my errors, I certainly deserve a harsh rebuke.

"And Don't Go Near the Water!"

Copyright, 1937, by American Newspapers, Inc.



The dog fight in Spain is getting so hot Europe is beginning to look around for HELP.

But Uncle Sam has hung his clothes on the hickory limb of ABSOLUTE NEUTRALITY and will not go near the water.

The last European dog fight he got into was ENOUGH.

Whatever happens in Europe now is EUROPE'S business, as far as America is concerned.

We are going to stay home and mind OUR business.

New York Day by Day -:-

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, June 3—The illustrator E. Simms Campbell is the only Negro to receive recognition in top ranking magazines. Such as Cosmopolitan, Esquire and the rest. His flair is for the pretty debutante against the drawing room background. He uses models of his own race for white delineations.

A very serious-minded young man, he occupies a studio and home in The Dunbar, an apartment house built for his race in Harlem. His wife is his constant companion and often poses for him. Much of his ability to paint and draw comes naturally although he has studied prodigiously.

Just now he is anxious to lay aside enough to study awhile in Paris and Florence. His first commercialized efforts were drawings he sent out by mail as he feared his color might be a hindrance. But he found no such attitude exists among art editors.

He is now receiving the same pay for his work as ranking artists. Many colored folks have shown a talent for the drawing board that was never marketed. Bert Williams was a deft caricaturist and the late Florence Mills did some creditable water colors.

No one ever rose more spectacularly in Wall Street than Jessie L. Livermore in the sky-rocketing days when he was known as "the fair haired boy of the markets," and from which dizzy whirl he plucked fabulous fortunes. He was a head-turner in the cafes and at big sporting events. One of the outstanding celebrities.

Then came his reverses, losing a fortune today and regaining it tomorrow until the final crack-up. Then he dropped out of sight. But he's in circulation again. Now and then he is seen on the avenue going to a building where he maintains offices.

He sends out for his lunches and is no longer on view at first nights or other spots where he was so long a personage.

Bill Robinson, the deservedly popular Bojangles of Harlem, can neither read nor write. When he appears as a guest star on the radio the studio warns script writers not to change his dialogue or cues because he has already memorized them from the script reading. He has an uncanny memory and after lines are read to him twice he never forgets.

While he is not sensitive to friends knowing of the educational lack for which he was not to blame, he doesn't care to have the studio audiences know, and always appears before the microphone with script in hand.

His mentor is Jesse Owens, the sprinter, whom he admires greatly because of his college education. Owens reads and rehearses the stuff with him.

I lived at an uptown hotel where Shoeless Joe Jackson of the Chicago ball team put up when in New York. He could not read nor write, but had been taught a scrawl that could be deciphered as his signature for registering. In the dining room he ate with a fellow player who knew of his deficiency, but Jackson always studied the menu carefully as his friend wrote out their orders.

Speaking of illiteracy, Kin Hubbard's pet story concerned the illiterate in an Ohio town who ran a drug store speakeasy. One of those places with a window full of empty corn salve boxes and nothing behind the prescription case save a barrel of whiskey. Every morning the proprietor would sit out front as the town went to work, professing to read the Cincinnati Enquirer.

One morning as he held the paper upside down upon which was the picture of a battleship just launched, a passerby called: "What's the news today Uncle Billy?"

It was during the Spanish American war and, holding up the upside down newspaper, he replied: "Those Spanish scoundrels have sunk another battleship!"

John D.'s Achievements

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

Rene Descartes, the eighteenth century French philosopher, thought the pineal gland, on top of the head, was the seat of the soul. Ancient Oriental mystics toyed with the same idea.

Edwin C. Hill

Curiously, the idol's eye of the Hindus marks the location of the pineal gland. In some lower forms of vertebrates it has somewhat the structure of an eye, and has been called the "pineal eye."

Young John D. Rockefeller, teaching his Sunday class at Cleveland, doubtless had no such conception of the seat of the soul. But, just a few days before his death, it was disclosed that in the last year of his life, the Rockefeller Foundation had spent $900,000 in the study of the pineal gland and other glands. And, with all deference to scientific precision, it may be said that they, too, seek the "seat of the soul."

Raymond B. Fosdick, President of the Foundation, refers in his annual report to the effort "to describe an emotion in terms of chemical reaction, or prescribe a hormone for a mental state."

Endrocrinology, the study of the ductless glands, has been an absorbing interest of the Foundation since 1929. In that year they began concentrating on mental hygiene, subsequently spending about $64,000,000 in this research, through grants to medical schools. And mental hygiene today means chiefly glands. And, here, if anywhere in the domain of materialistic science, lies the seat of the soul.

DID VAST GOOD

Rockefeller, the $12-a week clerk, had a vaulting ambition to accumulate $100,000. He gathered more than a billion and gave away $750,000,000. One thinks of the young man's bewilderment if some voice of prophecy had whispered that one day he would spend $64,000,000 for knowledge of some curious little pellets in the human body which made a balanced orchestration of emotion, thought and will.

The building of the Rockefeller fortune, in the context of America's great industrial era, has been widely studied and appraised, and there will be a long journalistic epilogue to his amazing career.

More difficult to weigh or appraise are the gleanings of scientific knowledge made possible by his millions. The world which these surplus millions have explored is more profoundly changed than the world of machines and energies which nurtured, rewarded and, in turn, profited by his financial genius.

The young Rockefeller could have comprehended the latter vision, but probably neither he nor any other man of his age could have even vaguely glimpsed the labyrinth of scientific wonders to which his gold was to be the sesame. Foundation scientists, Daniel Boones of the submicroscopic wilderness, study chlorophyll, the green coloring matter of plants.

Here is the "light trap," the point of transition from inanimate to animate matter, from the inorganic to the organic. Here, perhaps, is the portal of life, the gateway to the ultimate secret.

The planetary outreach of the Rockefeller fortune ranges inward to the infinitesimal. Rockefeller biochemists study the genes. Here is a door unlocked late in the days of the 97-year-old John D. Rockefeller. In the life cell is the chromosome, which is a bagful of genes. The genes are like the colored balls on a Chinese abacus, which your Chinese laundryman slips up and down to add up your bill.

CONTROLS HEREDITY

Their arrangement determines the color of your hair and eyes, your mental, physical and emotional heritage from this parent or that, or both of them, or shadowy ancestors far back in the dim pathways of heredity.

"The cargo of heredity," Mr. Fosdicks call them in his report, "carrying, compacted in their minuteness, the whole load of inheritance from one generation to the next."

The Foundation studies the hormones, secretions of the ductless glands which rule the chemistration of the body and, in the light of recent research, the mind. They are beginning to produce them synthetically, along with the enzymes, equally mysterious and potent instruments of the life chemistry. The Foundation gives grants and stimulates research among many, many universities and research institutions.

Among them are Johns Hopkins University; The Institute of Child Welfare of the University of California; the Institute for Psychoanalysis in Chicago; the Institute of Human Genetics at the University of Copenhagen; the National Committee for Mental Hygiene; Galton Laboratory; University of London; Maudsley Hospital, London; College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University; Worcester State Hospital Massachusetts; the University of Amsterdam, and the University of Leyden, Netherlands.

Merchant princes of the Byzantine empire and the Italian city-states left marmoreal splendors to acclaim and perpetuate their fame, and, incidentally, released the great art upsurge of the Renaissance. The great Elizabethan magnificos gave a tremendous but incidental stimulus to learning and the arts, as did the resplendent Indian rajahs, but the modern industrial age marks the first diversion for the secrets of widespread human well-being. And the world outreach of the Rockefeller Foundation is the apex of this endeavour.

On the Nail

By Benjamin DeCasseres

And so they were married and lived happily ever after.

Thus concluded the love-stories in the days when life was simpler and less sophisticated.

Today the king who gave up a throne for a "commoner" will also give up his bachelorhood and become the husband of Mrs. Wallis Warfield, of Baltimore, U. S. A.

The worst cynic cannot deny that here is a love-match pure and simple, a love as devotional and passionate as that of Paola and Francesca or Abelard and Heloise.

And excepting for a small set of political tinkerers and social snobs in England, there is no one in the whole world today who will not say "GOOD-LUCK! BON VOYAGE!" to the Duke and Duchess of Windsor.

Kipling, Wells, Shaw and Arnold Bennett made writing pay. So did Dumas, Victor Hugo and Dickens.

But very often famous songs do not pay the writers of them. There was Septimus Winner, for instance, who wrote "Listen to the Mocking Bird," "Oh Where! Oh Where! Is My Little Dog Gone?" and "What Is Home Without a Mother?"

Winner sold his copyright in 1855 on "Listen to the Mocking Bird" for FIVE DOLLARS. The purchasers found it a mint and sold more than 20,000,000 copies. King Edward the Seventh and Abraham Lincoln used to whistle it.

On the one hundredth and tenth anniversary of Winner's birth in Philadelphia recently, Charles E. Claghorn published a book called "The Mocking Bird" which tells all about this man who thrilled the whole world for nearly a century—for $5!

Bermuda is now only five hours away—by plane. These islands are probably the "still vex'd Bermoothes" of Shakespeare, where he laid the scene of his magical play, "The Tempest."

As a matter of fact, Bermuda was discovered during a tempest. Juan Bermudez, a Spaniard on his way from Cuba to Spain, was wrecked there early in the sixteenth century. England took possession of the islands in 1609. It was a year afterward that Shakespeare began to write "The Tempest."

In these beautiful islands—never troubled by a war—one can well imagine Prospero, the magician, working his wonders. But there was one wonder the mighty Prospero could not conjure with his mantle and wand—A TRIP BY AIR FROM BERMUDA TO NEW YORK IN FIVE HOURS!

Speaking of magic—
Fish from the skies—

A consular report to the Cuban state department reports that on El Pantano Plateau, in Honduras, sardines fell during a downpour of rain. Two years ago a similar celestial fish-fry descended on Central Mexico.

The late Charles Fort, of New York City, spent a lifetime collecting from authentic records in scientific journals and newspapers that went back for more than a hundred years descriptions of the most astounding aerial phenomena.

These journals describe rains of blood, fish, rock, unclassifiable bugs and even implements of war that are not known on our planet.

Fort's theory was that all these things descended from invisible worlds all around us. He contended that some day we would break through into these other dimensions, and be able, so he said, to walk to the moon—if you care for such a long and chilly walk.

Another literary masterpiece has been produced by the Department of Agriculture. It is BS—92, otherwise known as "The American Chameleon and Its Care." Give it time, and it may be acclaimed as great an achievement in scientific research and the equal in popular appeal of that other classic entitled "The Love Life of a Frog."

Departmental experts prepared and published "The American Chameleon and Its Care" to answer the multitude of questions asked by thousands and thousands of people who have purchased chameleons from circuses, carnivals, etc.

Popularly known as a small reptile which always changes its color to match its surroundings, the chameleon, government research has disclosed, only changes color when it is angry or sleepy or dead.

With this knowledge available, there is no excuse for anybody getting stung in the future in the purchase of a chameleon.

A valuable and informative sequel to "The American Chameleon and Its Care" could be written on "The Political Chameleon." Compared with the political chameleon, his reptilian cousin is a rank amateur at changing color.

When you buy a chameleon at a circus you may be taking quite a gamble but it isn't anything compared with the uncertainty you face when you go to the polls to elect officials to public office.

You may know what a candidate has PROMISED to do, but that is no assurance of what he will do if he is elected.

In the judgment of United States Senator Byrd of Virginia, a dyed-in-the-wool Democrat, "THERE EXISTS AT WASHINGTON THE MOST WASTEFUL AND BUREAUCRATIC FORM OF GOVERNMENT THAT HAS EVER BEEN KNOWN IN OUR HISTORY." That is what he told the student body of the University of Richmond. It is all the more serious because there is no partisan motive behind it.

Senator Byrd's denunciation of governmental waste and bureaucracy is not based on snap judgment. As chairman of the Senate Committee on Governmental Reorganization, he has been investigating the conditions of which he speaks for several months. It is plain that he knows what he is talking about.

President Roosevelt has indicated that he also is convinced governmental expenses CAN be cut. And even Postmaster General Farley has declared the budget can be balanced by 1938 and "we must cut down on spending."

One thing which puzzles taxpayers is this: "With so much unanimity in Washington on the proposition that expenses can be reduced and must be reduced, WHY AREN'T THEY REDUCED?"

The answer seems to be that almost everybody wants someone else to bear the brunt of the cutting.

It is a lucky thing for Senator Byrd that he holds office in the United States instead of in Germany. Any German official who dared criticize the Nazi government wouldn't be an official very long. He would be lucky to keep his head.

The principal of a boys' school in East Prussia who criticized the government at a religious meeting has been exiled from Prussia and has been forbidden to ever make another public address in Germany. Freedom of speech is not tolerated under Fascist rule.

During an aerial attack on Valencia, temporary capital of Spain, the building in which the American Embassy is located was damaged by bombs and the American consul had a narrow escape from injury when he was caught in a rain of debris.

Why in the world do we maintain an embassy and keep official representatives in Spain while that country is in the throes of civil war?
